Lend-Lease Foes Target Of Furious Senate Attack

Opponents Win New Restriction On Presidential Use of Arms Funds

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senate Administration forces yesterday struck furiously back at opponents of the lend-lease bill with countercharges of warmongering and undermining public confidence in the President.

Tempers strained by aid-Britain delays impatiently snapped in a half-dozen oratorical clashes, as leaders repeatedly took the floor in rebuttal of the opposition case.

Opposition spokesmen replied in kind. Earlier in a conference they agreed in effect to block any action on the bill or amendments during the remainder of this week.

Culminating the Senate's first real day of fast-moving debate, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, announced the most important concession to the critics of the bill since the measure left the House.

Meets Chief Objection

Meeting the chief objection raised to the bill by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, Byrnes said bill managers will accept an amendment to limit or entirely eliminate use of future Army and Navy appropriations for British arms loans.

The bill as now drafted would restrict the President's loans of existing Army and Navy equipment to $1,300,000,000 but places no definite limit on loans from future military and naval appropriations.

Byrnes denied it was actually a concession. He took the view that the bill cannot bind Congress to any future course of action, but he agreed not to oppose the restriction asked.

The Administration's purpose has been from the start to make separate and distinct appropriations for British aid, not confusing these with future Army and Navy requirements, Byrnes stated.

Plan "Clarifying" Amendments

Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee immediately backed up the Byrnes pledge with a promise to present "clarifying" amendments that will make clear this purpose.

The Administration offer removed a serious point of controversy on the bill. It coincided with an amendment designed to achieve the same purpose introduced by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia. This provided that no defense articles produced from funds hereafter appropriated be transferred unless specifically authorized by Congress.

With the proposed change, the bill would give Congress undisputed power to say what funds would be alloted and what committments made for any British aid in excess of $1,300,000,000 of existing Army and Navy equipment.

Following adjournment, the debate continued on the radio.

Norris Defends Bill

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who opposed United States entry into the World War, broadcast his support of the bill as a means of remaining out of the present conflict.

"As I see it, this bill is necessary to keep us out of war," said Norris. "If we pass the bill, the probabilities are that England will win; that Hitler will fall, and that the great machine built up by him to destroy the peace of a civilized world will fall apart and disappear."

Over another network, Senator LaFollette, son of the man who fought with Norris against involvement in the last war, was asserting the aid bill would lead to war and

Roosevelt and Aides Prepare to Send Surplus Arms When Lease Bill Passes

By Frank L. Kluckhohn

Acting upon the assurances of Senate and House leaders that the lend-lease bill will be passed without further substantial amendment, President Roosevelt took steps yesterday looking to the transfer to Great Britain of all war supplies from the present stores of the Army and Navy which could be spared without crippling the American armed forces.

A series of conferences at the White House was attended by key officials and advisers, including Harry L. Hopkins, who is mentioned to an increasing degree as the prospective coordinator of the lease-lend program.

Attending the first conference were Secretaries Hull and Stimson, James V. Forrestal, acting Secretary of the Navy; Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

They were with the President most of the morning. Immediately after luncheon they returned for another conference and were joined by Secretary Morgenthau.

Talks with Dowding

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt talked with Sir Hugh Dowding, British air marshal, and during this conversation Hopkins, who lives at the White House, was called in. The meeting between the British air official and the President was arranged by John G. Winant, who is preparing for departure to his new post as Ambassador to England.

Yesterday's was the first definite major move the President or anyone else in the Government has made toward assembling existing American war supplies and moving them in the direction of embarkation ports for England.

Mr. Roosevelt has refrained from moving supplies out of arsenals and navy yards pending adoption of the lease-lend bill. The measure will go through late this week or early next, Congress leaders informed him yesterday, despite the increasing fury of debate in the Senate.

Administration sources revealed that the final inventories of British war needs and existing American supplies were checked at the White House conference to determine what

249 Out of 703 Pass Examination For District Bar

A few more than one-third of 703 applicants passed the examinations for admission to the bar here last December.

Walter C. Clephane, chairman on admissions, yesterday announced the names. The list contained the names of 23 women and 226 men. The percentage passing was 35.4, slightly lower than in previous years.

Judge Ralph Given, secretary of the committee, immediately set his staff to work verifying the characters of those who passed before they will be eligible for admission to the bar.

Life Insurance Heads Criticized

The Monopoly Committee yesterday released a report on life insurance companies by two members of the Securities Commission staff. The report states that the funds of many policyholders are "in jeopardy" because of flagrant cases of conflict (of interest) and breach of trust" by company directors and calls present methods of electing these directors "an undemocratic situation."

Bethlehem Steel Strikers Fight Workers Seeking to Enter Plant

Notice of Intent to Walk Out at Four Ford Factories Is Filed in Michigan

Bulletin

Buffalo, N. Y., (Thursday) Feb. 27. (AP).—Violence flared early today along the two-mile picket line at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s plant in suburban Lackawanna as strikers sought to keep workers from entering gates leading to plant property.

Hottest spot on the line was the strip mill gate where in a 30-minute period five automobiles were battered with sticks and windows smashed. Ten cars were chased away.

The National Defense effort last night confronted its most serious strike situation to date, as C. I. O. workmen quit their jobs at the vast Lackawanna, N. Y., plant of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and formal notice of intent to strike at four big Ford Motor Co. plants was filed.

Determined efforts of Defense Commision representatives to avert last night's steel walkout came to naught as several thousand pickets were thrown about the workings promptly at the 9 o'clock deadline previously set for the stoppage.

The plant employs 14,000 men, and the C. I. O.'s Steel Workers Organizing Committee claims to have enrolled 8,000 of them. C. I. O. officials have warned of the likelihood of the strike spreading to other Bethlehem plants, holding an estimated $1,500,000,000 worth of defense contracts.

Bethlehem had been told by union officials that the walkout could be prevented by granting a 25 per cent increase in wages, reinstating several hundred workers who the union said had been locked out, and agreeing to a collective bargaining election.

Thomas Burns and C. S. Ching had been hurried to the plant by the Defense Commission yesterday to seek a settlement. Following failure of the negotiations, Burns said the two would return here at once to report to the OPM on con-

D. C. Hospital Portrayed as Co-conspirator

Trustees Barred GHA Doctors Against His Advice, Says Randall

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Although their president recommended otherwise, trustees of National Homeopathic Hospital voted to exclude Group Health Association physicians from the medical staff, a District Court jury was told yesterday.

The hospital's action, held by the Government to be a link in the alleged conspiracy of organized medicine to obstruct GHA, was taken at the request of Dr. J. B. Gregg Custis, its executive officer and a defendant in the antitrust case on trial, according to evidence introduced yesterday.

After winning an important victory in Justice James M. Proctor's ruling that the deeds and declarations of the 12 hospitals involved were binding upon the defendants, the prosecution brought to light the Homeopathic trustees' action by calling Col. Joseph Randall to the stand.

Yesterday's star witness for the Government, which is attempting to convict 20 doctors and four medical groups of violating the Sherman Act, was president of Homeopathic on November 4, 1937, when the trustees voted against admission to professional privileges of GHA staff physicians.

By subpenaed documents and oral testimony, the prosecution also brought out that:

Dr. John Ogle Warfield, jr., a defendant, sent questionnaires to Washington hospitals, in his capacity as chairman of the District Medical Society's hospital committee, and then—as representative of Garfield and Chil-

Raiders Use Superflare On Britain

Dropped by First Wave to Light Targets For Those Following

By George Lait
International News Service Staff Writer

London (Thursday), Feb. 27.—Using a new type of super-flare, wave after wave of German bombers attacked London and two other areas in England and Wales during the night.

Early today rescue workers struggled through piles of debris in one London section, where high explosive bombs demolished ten buildings, and trapped an unknown number of persons. At least seven wounded persons were rescued.

Fires were started in a Thames estuary town where large damage was caused by high explosive bombs and civilians were trapped in the wreckage of shattered buildings.

In the Welsh town incendiaries and high explosives badly damaged a church, set fire to a children's home and caused numerous casualties, some of them fatal.

There were three air-raid warnings during the day and night, the last being the 488th of the war.

The new type flares employed for the first time tonight by the Luftwaffe bombers were composed of from 40 to 50 flares in one bundle attached to a single parachute.

First flares were dropped to illuminate the target and then came a shower of incendiaries and explosives. The antiaircraft fire was extremely heavy, but the raiders were too high to be shot down.

The first air-raid warning was during the daytime. The second was one of the earliest night warnings of recent weeks and lasted two hours. After a brief interval, the sirens shrieked again as new waves of raiding planes crossed the south-

Engineer Killed, Fireman Hurt In D. C. Freight Train Wreck

One man was killed, another was injured and a third escaped harm yesterday when a 50-car freight train plowed into the rear of a work train which was standing at Lamond Station, Takoma Park, D. C.

The dead man is the engineer, Samuel Snyder, 53, of Barthlow, near New Market, Md. He was pinned beneath the locomotive when he jumped from the cab after working futilely until a second before the impact to avoid the crash.

Andrew Duffy, of Baltimore, the fireman, is in Casualty Hospital with severe head lacerations suffered in jumping from the train.

William C. Christian, also of Baltimore, the brakeman on the same train, jumped to safety unscathed.

The Baltimore & Ohio freight, which was traveling south, toppled the caboose of the other B. & O. train 15 feet down an embankment into Blair Road between Underwood and Van Buren Streets.

The striking locomotive also toppled down the embankment after overturning the caboose and crumpling the car ahead, a tanker, which was left hanging half-way over the embankment.

Amsterdam Put Under Army Rule; Strikers Warned Of Death Penalty

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam (via Berlin), Feb. 26.—Six civilians were killed and a number wounded today in clashes between the police and "disturbers of the peace," it was officially announced tonight.

A brief German announcement stated that these deaths had occurred in police actions during which "the ringleaders of nightly attacks against the police patrol and a secret Jewish organization were uncovered."

"During the act of restoring order six disturbers of the peace were killed and a number more or less severely injured.

"A great number of persons responsible for the disturbances or having participated therein were arrested."

Strikes and riots brought the imposition of a German military administration upon all the province of North Holland today.

Strikers were ordered back to work by Thursday, and all parades, demonstrations and assemblies on the streets were forbidden.

Activity by political parties, including the wearing of uniforms and insignia of any kind, was banned in the province.

The order, issued by the German military commander, Gen. Friedrich Christiansen, applied to Amsterdam, chief city of the Netherlands, but left out Rotterdam and The Hague, outside North Holland Province. Military courts will handle violators.

"I have taken over executive power for the Province of North Holland in view of the present political situation," the general said.

He ordered activity in all public and private enterprises to be resumed to "the fullest extent" by Thursday, warned that provoking strikes or discontinuance of work "will be punishable by imprisonment of 15 years," and said that if violations occurred in connection with army enterprises—"to which all vital industries belong"—capital punishment might follow.

The strikes started among municipal workers and then spread to private concerns.

Today's demonstrations were among a series which broke out after recent clashes in Amsterdam in which various factions, including Dutch Nazis, were involved. The German authorities blamed Jews for the disorders.

Flames Consume Top of Bethesda High School

BULLETIN

John Adair, 26, a fireman, was killed early today when struck by an automobile as he wound up hose on East-West Highway at Bethesday-Chevy Chase High School.

An automobile, police said, broke through police flares put up to stop traffic and struck Adair, who lived at 301 Highview Avenue, Silver Spring.

Fire late last night swept through the third floor of the $600,000 Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. Fire companies from five Montgomery County communities and the District saved the school from destruction.

Leland K. Williams, of 812 G Street Northwest, an English teacher at the school, suffered an injury to a leg when he attempted to save the files of The Tatler, the high school publication.

The fire, which officials believe had been smouldering since 9 p. m., was discovered at about 11:30 by a passerby who notified Bethesda police, Fire Chief A. J. Bargagni, of the Chevy Chase Fire Department, immediately summoned aid from Washington, Glen Echo, Bethesda, Cabin John, Kensington and Silver Spring.

The fire was placed under control in an hour and a half, after the blaze had virtually gutted the third floor cafeteria, and burned part of the roof.

Dr. Edwin F. Broome, county superintendent of schools, announced that there would be no school today for its 800 pupils.

British Lop Off First Colony From Italy's African Empire

Mogadiscio, Capital Of Somaliland, Falls; 3,000 Captives Taken

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Feb. 26.—The British announced today the capture of Mogadiscio, capital of Italian Somaliland, and unofficially claimed control of all its 270,000 square miles, picturing it as the first entire colony to be knocked out of the Fascist empire.

Mogadiscio, a city of 55,000, fell to British troops who had thrust forward 400 miles from British Kenya, and other columns were declared to have driven 60 miles up the Juba River to entrap the main Italian forces between the captured towns of Gelib and Brava and cut their last road of retreat.

Italian prisoners were estimated at 3,000. Seizure of vast quantities of guns and ammunition was announced.

British sources said the country

Royal Navy Seizes Dodecanese Island, Fascist Air Base

By the Associated Press

London, Feb., 26.—British forces have occupied the fortified Italian island and seaplane base of Castelrosso, off Turkey's southwestern coast, it was announced officially tonight as Britain moved quickly to reinforce her alliance with Turkey.

The seizure of the tiny island, easternmost of Italy's bases in the Mediterranean, roused speculation that Britain, with Turkey's consent, might be preparing to seize all of the strategic Italian Dodecanese islands.

The occupation of the Italian island base—a stepping stone to Italy's Rhodes stronghold, 80 miles to the west—was regarded as a preliminary move to quick British aid to Turkey if the latter enters the war against the Axis.

Eden May Seek Balkan Buffer, Restrictions on Dardanelles

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Feb. 26.—British Foreign Secretary Eden and Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of Britain's imperial general staff, met diplomats and Turkish leaders here today in conferences which are expected to determine the course of British-Turkish action in the Balkans.

The Britons were welcomed tumultuously upon their arrival.

It was understood Eden and Turkish officials would discuss the passage of foreign merchant ships through the Dardanelles to the Black Sea. Some sources believed Britain is requesting that such vessels be allowed passage only with express permission from Ankara.

It was pointed out that Germany now controls the Rumanian Black Sea port of Constanta, might soon

Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 26.—It was learned in well-informed quarters here tonight that Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Moscow, is en route to Ankara, Turkey, by plane to see British Foreign Secretary Eden and Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British imperial general staff, some time tomorrow or early Friday.

He is expected to report on the evolution of the Russian attitude in face of the Balkan developments of the last three or four days. While he is there it is felt likely Eden also will call the ministers to Sofia and Belgrade to attend the conversations and report.

Following these conversations Eden is expected to proceed to

Cables Win Nazi Promise To Broadcast Purim Program

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 26.—The official Berlin radio tonight informed its American listeners, the National Broadcasting Co. reported, that in response to cabled requests it would broadcast a Purim day program on the Jewish holiday March 13.

"The Kelleys" of America were also promised an appropriate Irish program on St. Patrick's day, March 17, and the announcer warned that Berlin would not "assume responsibility for traffic jams" which might result if "Irish traffic cops" deserted their posts to hear the broadcast.

No mention was made of the hundreds of cabled requests—all solicited and paid for by the Berlin radio—which asked for a description of Hitler's funeral and an eyewitness account of the bombing of the German Chancellery by the R. A. F.

The announcer said "one Robert Jacobs, of New York City," had requested the Purim program, which the radio management considered a good idea since "most of those who cabled in from the Bronx and the downtown (New York) garment centers will be at home and within reach of their radio on that particular day."

The announcer said many communications from Americans with Irish names "expressed no uncertain opinion about the present situation in Ireland and the present state of Ireland's long struggle for freedom from England."

Apparently desirious of matching the light tone of some of the selected requests, the announcer deferred for "30 or 40 years" an invitation to meet Joe Louis in a prize fight at Los Angeles.

The announcer said "some of the radiograms received simply overwhelmed us due to the generosity expressed."

Purely 'Precautionary'

13,000 Navy Yard Employes Measured for Gas Masks

The Navy is measuring 13,000 employes at the Navy Yard for gas masks and has started teaching them what to do in case of an aerial gas attack.

Under instructions issued by the Navy Department, it was disclosed yesterday, officials at the local gun factory will give each of the employes there a course in gas protection. This involves placing each individual in a gas chamber and filling it with a harmless gas, while he fits on a mask.

The object of the training course, it was explained by a Navy spokesman, is to accustom employes to putting on the mask and working in it, and prevent them from losing their heads in case of such an attack.

The training program and measurement of employes for masks will soon be extended to all other navy yards throughout the country, officials said. The plan was initiated here because the local yard is the only naval gun factory now in operation and is considered a likely target for any aerial assaults which might be launched against the United States.

It was stressed that the program is purely "precautionary" and is undertaken as a means of being ready for "any eventuality." No gas masks have been ordered as yet for civil employes, it was said, this being the "next step in the precautionary program."

Danube Crossed At Two Places, Say Rumors Rife In Bulgar Capital

Bulletin

Budapest (Thursday), Feb. 27 (INS).—The Turkish government early today suddenly closed the strategic Dardanelles—narrow gateway from the Mediterranean to the Black Sea—and prohibited all ships from passing through.

This action followed reports from Sofia that 12,000 Nazi troops have rolled into Bulgaria from Rumania.

Tension Mounts

By Russell Hill.

Sofia, Feb. 26.—Tension in Sofia tonight reached the highest point it has attained in a month of crisis as unconfirmed but alarming and persistent rumors flew from mouth to mouth.

These rumors, which were flatly denied in government circles, described the entry into Bulgaria of train loads of German soldiers, followed by hundreds of tanks.

[International News Service dispatches from Budapest say 12,000 German troops have rolled into Bulgaria from Rumania in the last 24 hours.]

According to one version which was circulating in Sofia tonight, crossings had been made at the Danube River points of Vidin (near the Yugoslav frontier) and Nicopol (across the river from Turnu Magurele).

However, when the reporter telephoned the towns named he was told that no troops had arrived on this side of the river. At both places, however, "movements" had been observed on the Rumanian side and on the river itself, he was informed. At a late hour this evening it was still impossible to sift fact from fiction sufficiently to gain a clear picture of the situation. According to what reliable information was available, it appeared that one of two things was happening. Either the German war of nerves, which has been waged unceasingly for the last few weeks, has reached a new intensity, or it had finally turned into the real thing.

There were several facts which seemed to indicate that there must

The plane was last heard from at 12:44 A. M. (E. S. T.) and was due at Atlanta at 12:55 A. M.

The airline officials here said the weather in the vicinity of Atlanta was "not too favorable."

The plane was in charge of Capt. James E. Perry, pilot, with L. E. Thomas, co-pilot, and Clarence Moore, steward.

First Skirmish In Libya Won, Nazis Report

By Percival Knauth

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 26.—The German high command today announced for the first time the participation of German troops in the North African campaign.

A German motorized advance patrol, it is stated, met a British motorized patrol, and in the ensuing skirmish, the Germans claim, a number of British armored cars were destroyed and several prisoners taken. The German forces, it is stated, suffered no losses.

German quarters profess to see in this and other reports from the African front the first indications of a coming new phase in the war in Africa. It is the expressed conviction of German circles that the British offensive has petered out in the vast Desert of Libya and that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's forward movement has "come to a standstill."

This new turn of events is held here to be primarily the result of successive attacks by strong forces of German bombers not only on the British troops and their supplies in Libya, but also along the "entire Mediterranean front." Gen. Wavell's advance, it is pointed out here, only can continue if he can keep the harbors in Cyrenaica, such as Bengasi, Derna and Tobruk, open for supplies, since his communications with Egypt are precarious at best in view of the difficulties of traversing the desert terrain.

These Libyan ports, however, are now under the "constant patrol" of the German air force, the Germans point out. The British troops themselves, they say, are daily attacked by the German planes with bombs, destroying their encampments and munitions dumps and with machine guns strafing their formations.

The German planes, moreover, are based in Libya, as German reports from that front show. The Junkers 87 Stuka bombers, which have been the chief agents of German destruction on the Libyan front, do not have a sufficient radius of action to permit their effectively bombing objectives in Cyrenaica from their bases in Sicily. For that reason, as is revealed in one German report, complete front-line airports have been established in Libya.

There is no indication here as to how long the German land forces mentioned in today's high command report have been active in Libya. Though Premier Mussolini spoke of their presence in his last speech Sunday, today's report is the first German confirmation of his words.

The German high command communique today reported an air attack on a "harbor of Cyrenaica" which later reports revealed to have been Tobruk. Two 10,000-ton freighters in the harbor were bombed and set afire, it is stated, while other hits were registered on docks and harbor appointments. One of these ships, hit by two bombs, was reportedly blasted by a further series of explosions, which leads Germans to believe that it was loaded with munitions.

Rome's Bulletins Echo Nazi Reports

By Herbert L. Matthews

Rome, Feb. 26.—A German corps has gone into action in Libya, it was announced in the Italian as well as German war bulletins today.

Their motorized units clashed with British forces southeast of Agedabia.

The fact that the skirmish of the armored units occurred southeast of Agedabia seems to point to a British retreat from El Agheila. There are reports of much bigger things to come in that region and great hopes are entertained in some Italian circles.

Yesterday Signor Bergeret in the Gazetta del Popolo said that Salonika will be given to Bulgaria. Today, the Giornale D'Italia's Sofia correspondent writes that the British are in for hard blows in Bulgaria, whose effects "will probably not be localized." The Bulgarians do not want war, he continues, but that is only on the condition that "peace does not signify a triumph of the English and their control over the Balkans."

east coast.

Flares floating to earth in the London area were quickly extinguished by ground defense organizations. The all clear was given after half an hour.

Earlier English watchers on the southeast cliffs watched a dogfight in which a German fighter was brought down.

In the golden sunset an enemy formation of raiders came over the coast at 20,000 feet and was spotted by an R. A. F. patrol group operating at an even greater altitude. One of the British fighters broke formation and dived, with all eight machine guns blazing.

The German plane singled out by the R. A. F. fighter banked, dived and ducked into a small cloud from which it reappeared with the R. A. F. plane close on its tail. Another burst of the British plane's machine guns were heard and then flames sprouted from the port wing of the German plane, a Messerschmitt 109 fighter.

The German dived toward the sea with smoke pouring in a white plume from the plane's tail and plunged into the Channel.

be at least some basis in reality for the numerous rumors which were rampant in Sofia. The Bulgarian press has opened a campaign to prepare the nation for "sacrifices." Householders are being cautioned to be prepared to blackout their windows at a moment's notice, although the blackout order has still not been given.

Alarm was increased by a report from Berlin that the German press had predicted "great events" for Bulgaria in the near future. It was impossible to communicate with Berlin by telephone as the lines were said by the operators to be "disturbed."

The situation bore a striking resemblance to that in Rumania last October, when the entry of German troops there was first reported. They were in the country for several days before their appearance in the capital and it was, therefore, extremely difficult to confirm their presence. It would be possible for a penetration to be made here in a similar manner and it might be some time before a clear picture of the situation could be had.

According to one rumor here tonight, German engineers were clearing the passes in the Balkan mountain range. A second rumor said that the vanguard of the troops had actually reached that range. Both are included among the rumors which were categorically denied by government spokesmen. The Balkan mountain range is a formidable barrier, running across the entire country, from the Yugoslav border to the Black Sea. There are only four practicable passes in this great natural barrier.

Several Seized in Plot To Spoil Sofia's Water

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Feb. 26.—The chief of staff of the Bulgarian army, Gen. Nicola Petkoff, conferred late today with Premier Philoff and Foreign Minister Popoff, and tonight the cabinet met in emergency session.

German Minister Richtofen was understood to have talked during the late afternoon with Popoff.

Police arrested several persons on charges of plotting sabotage of Sofia's water supply, and seized quantities of explosives and chemicals they said were intended to blast the waterworks and render the water supply unfit for use.

British citizens who had no imperative reason to remain were advised by their government to leave Bulgaria tonight. Blackout restrictions and threatening antiaircraft batteries cast about the city a sense of sharp and imminent events.

Bulgarians watched proceedings in Turkey, where British Foreign Secretary Eden has arrived for conferences, almost as closely as they did the Danube.

Diplomatic quarters heard that Eden has discussed with the Greek Minister in Ankara a proposed British-Greek accord by which neither would sign a separate peace.

Such a pact, diplomats said, would be viewed as discouraging Nazi hopes of getting the Athens government to sign an armistice with Italy, and might be the signal for a Nazi military push.

New Blows Dealt at Sea, Berlin Claims

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 26.—Germans emphasized the heightened tempo of their sea warfare today with accounts of new blows against British shipping.

With more than 250,000 tons of British ships declared already sunk "in the past few days," the following additional achievements were claimed today:

Sinking of a British destroyer by a Nazi speed boat off southeast England and destruction of an 8,000-ton armored merchant ship and a British patrol boat by submarines.

Three British cargo ships totaling 21,000 tons were bombed and set afire by the Luftwaffe northwest of Ireland early today, and damage to a 10,000-ton British munitions ship and another merchant vessel of equal size in a raid—time unspecified—on British-occupied Tobruk, Libya.

To these official reports were added accounts by D. N. B. official news agency, saying another British destroyer was set afire at Tobruk yesterday by a plane swooping within 40 feet to drop its bomb; a 5,000-ton ship sunk by bombs in the western Mediterranean and a British outpost boat sunk today by a German patrol plane off Peterhead, on the east Scottish coast.

A long-range German bomber still over the Atlantic radioed tonight that it had sunk a 10,000-ton Britain-bound steamer today and severely damaged a 6,000-tonner, the German news agency, D. N. B., announced tonight.

It was said that a German scouting plane had sunk a 2,000-ton ship at the entrance to Bristol Channel.

Newly unleashed submarines commanded by virtual novices alone sank 192,300 tons of convoyed shipping from Sunday noon until Monday night, according to information reaching Berlin.

(A London naval spokesman, disputing German claims, declared yesterday "nothing extraordinary" has happened in recent sea warfare.)

German dive bombers, supported by Italian fighters, made a fierce attack on the Luca airdrome at Malta late today, D. N. B. said, and the barracks were destroyed by flames and the hangar set afire. Six British Hurricanes were declared to have been destroyed, two of them by the Italians.

Malta Guns Down Seven Raiders

Valletta, Malta, Feb. 26 (INS).—Seven enemy planes were known to have been shot down and six others were believed to have been destroyed today during an air attack on this British stronghold in the Mediterranean.

British planes accounted for two of the enemy and five more were crashed by antiaircraft fire. Another six were so badly damaged that it was believed unlikely they would be able to reach their home base.

Rep. Sweeney Loses Libel Suit

New York, Feb. 26 (U.P.).—A verdict for the United Feature Syndicate was returned by a jury in Federal District Court today in the libel suit brought against the sydicate by Representative Martin Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio.

Sweeney had charged that the syndicate had libeled him in its newspaper feature "Washington Merry-Go-Round" which described the Congressman in 1938 as a spokesman for Father Coughlin and said that he had opposed the appointment of a foreign-born Jew to the Federal bench in Cleveland.

north of Mogadiscio was of such little importance that the possession of the capital itself—along with the substantial defeat of all the active Fascist forces in the colony—meant possession of Somaliland. Too, the campaign had achieved another objective: To seal the Indian Ocean side of Mussolini's empire.

From Mogadiscio, the British now are in position to strike inland toward Addis Ababa, to join other imperial forces and Ethiopian insurgents who are seeking the Italian throat there, but such a move was regarded here as doubtful because the heavy rains begin in March.

In Eritrea, British imperial troops striking at Cheren, which dominates the approaches to the colonial capital of Asmara, have made "satisfactory progress."

In Ethiopia the native insurgents and their British allies were declared to be pushing on in Gojjam Province and to have forced the Italians to evacuate a series of posts.

The British field victory in Somaliland was supported by bombers and warships, which heavily bombarded Italian coastal positions.

The British campaign for Somaliland began in earnest February 11 with an attack on Afmadu.

The Italian frontier defense consisted of an elastic screen of native conscripts based at Afmadu. With the capture of that town, the defense collapsed and the advancing British faced the second and major Italian line along the Juba.

The Fascists had two brigades strung some 60 miles along the river, handicapped by lack of knowledge as to where the British would strike.

At Afmadu, the British split into two columns, one column driving southward and taking the port of Chisimaio on February 14, with the aid of a naval bombardment, and then crossing the Juba near its mouth and taking Jumbo, on the east bank.

The other column crossed the river almost 100 miles to the north of its mouth, units wading across a shallow spot until pontoon bridges could be floated. The Italians were unable to assemble sufficient troops to block either crossing.

The two columns then moved to join each other along the river's east bank, and here the fiercest fighting of the campaign took place. The Fascist strong points of Margarita and Gelib were taken along with more than 1,500 Italian troops.

This cleanup achieved, the reunited columns rapidly moved more than 100 miles along the coastal road to take Brava and Mogadiscio.

Eden May Seek Balkan Buffer

Athens for a few days' consultations with the Greek government and British and Greek military chiefs, after which he will return to Cairo.

One usually well-informed diplomat here tonight expressed his opinion that these consultations foreshadow "a sensational development" in the Balkans within the next few days.

Pressed for an explanation, he announced that information he had indicated that the British were making every effort to bring about the immediate formation of a buffer bloc, extending from the Adriatic to the Black Sea, to prevent the extension of German influence in the Balkans, protect the Straits and the Suez Canal, and relieve the threat on the rear of Suez which any extension of the conflict to the borders of the Aegean would make very real.

This rumor of the formation of a Balkan bloc has been current for some time. This is, however, the first time that there seemed to be any indication that Miscow might become interested.

Though this indication consists mainly in the presence of Sir Stafford at the conversations, it is, nevertheless, significant in view of the Russian intervention on a few occasions in the past, notably when Bogdan Philoff and Ivan Popoff, the Bulgarian premier and foreign minister, respectively, went to Vienna immediately following King Boris' trip to Reichsfuehrer Hitler in Berlin in November, and later when Premier Philoff once again went to Vienna "for his health."

control Bulgarian ports and thus might receive supplies through them.

United States Ambassador J. V. A. MacMurray and the Greek Minister to Ankara were among Eden's first callers.

Gen. Dill immediately began talks with Turkish military leaders. Eden may talk with both the Bulgarian and Yugoslav Ambassadors to Turkey.

The German radio said Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, gave a private showing of the Nazi film, "The Victory in the West," last night for Turkish Prime Minister Refik Saydam, Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu and other Turkish officials.

The film, showing the Nazi conquest of France and the Low Countries, "profoundly impressed" the Turks, the Berlin broadcaster said. This movie was shown last week to Bulgarian Premier Bogdan Philoff and his cabinet in Sofia and another of similar theme—"The Fall of Poland"—was displayed to Norwegian officials almost on the eve of the Nazi invasion of their country.

The Turkish official radio, reporting Eden's arrival, referred repeatedly today to Britain as "our friend and ally."

British Take Italian Base in Dodecanese

only 3 miles from Turkey's Anatolian coast south of Elmali and midway between Rhodes and the British base at Cyprus occurred yesterday, presumably by British naval and land forces, an admiralty and war office communique said.

Castelrosso, long regarded as an Italian "pistol" pointed at the rich Anatolian plains, was occupied by Italy in 1912 and Turkey never has abandoned her claim to the isle, which has a small bay but no naval facilities.

As a base for Italian bombing planes, the island has been a threat to Britain's Mediterranean naval bas at Alexandria 300 miles southward, to Crete, 300 miles to the west and to Cyprus.

The fact that a joint communique was issued indicated that the occupation was a joint operation by the British Mediterranean fleet and land troops.

(Last week, according to Belgrade dispatches, the British occupied and fortified as a naval and air base the Greek island of Lemnos in the upper Aegean, barely 40 miles from Greek Salonika, and close by the entrance to the Dardanelles.)

It was presumed that the Turkish government had been informed in advance and had consented, at least tacitly, to the British taking of the Italian island.

There have been strong indications that Britain, fearing a German thrust across Bulgaria against Greece and perhaps upon the Dardanelles, might use her naval mastery in the Mediterranean to seize the most important bases in Italy's Dodecanese group off Turkey's western coast.

Bombed Repeatedly

The Dodecanese have been subjected to repeated British aerial bombardments, and their people, virtually cut off from communication with the Italian peninsula, are reported to be suffering from severe food shortages.

Richard Austen Butler, parliamentary secretary for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons today that "all information suggests" that Adolf Hitler has completely set the stage for an early occupation of Bulgaria with his Balkan army.

Butler spoke for Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden who, with the chief of the general imperial staff, Gen. Sir John G. Dill, conferred in Ankara today with Turkish leaders on the Anglo-Turkish alliance and action to be taken if and when the Germans strike.

Butler told the House of Commons that Britain is "completely satisfied" with the attitude of Turkey with respect to her alliance with Britain, thereby answering fears that the Turks might refuse to fight until their own territory was invaded.

Reassured on Tangier

In the western Mediterranean danger spot, Butler said, a provisional wartime agreement has been reached with Spain regarding Tangier whereby Generalissimo Francisco Franco has given assurances that he will not fortify the international zone which his troops took over shortly after the collapse of France last year.

Turning to Balkan affairs, Butler said that on January 31 "competent Rumanian authorities informed the Chilean Legation, which is in charge of Polish interests in Rumania, that all interned Polish soldiers would be sent immediately to Germany."

"A protest was lodged by the Chilean charge d'affaires at this violation of international law," Butler said. "His Majesty's minister in Bucharest vigorously supported the protest.

"When His Majesty's minister and members of the legation left Bucharest February 15 it was understood that the Rumanian government had at least temporarily delayed the proposed action, but there is some reason now to believe that it may have taken place."

Propaganda Mill of Nazis Grinds Finely

Lynn Heinzerling, who with Edwin Shanke is describing conditions in Germany in a series of six daily stories for the special news service, tells here of the propaganda machine forged by Dr. Joseph Goebbels and of the work of a war correspondent in Berlin.

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 26.—Dr. Joseph Goebbels has been in the public eye little in recent months, but the mighty instrument which he has forged to spread propaganda and enlightenment among the Germans and throughout the world works on unceasingly.

Over the air waves, in books and newspapers and out of the mouths of Nazi leaders from Adolf Hitler down to the lowest party functionary comes the same thesis: "Britain started this war, Germany will win it, and Germany and Italy together will then set up a new order in which mankind will be happier, more prosperous and freed of wars for all time."

To fire these ideas at the people day after day, month after month, an organization of thousands of workers has been created, and millions of marks have been spent. From all indications, the Germans are prepared to spend millions more.

A foreigner, and especially an American in Berlin, marvels at the organization of this tremendous campaign without the slightest apparent opposition. No writer, no speaker, no newspaper ever gives the slightest suggestion publicly that any part of this Nazi creed could be doubted.

Doubters Are Maligned

Party leaders occasionally indicate there are citizens who question the accuracy of all three points, referring to such doubters as "effete aristocrats" and "malicious gossipers."

The citizen and resident in Berlin bumps into this campaign almost constantly. His newspaper in the morning never refers to the war without adding the phrase "which Britain declared on us."

The German military communique, in reporting an air raid on England, calls it a "reprisal" for raids by the R. A. F. on "nonmilitary objectives" in Germany.

The same ideas are carried out in posters on party bulletin boards and on walls of buildings. The poster most often seen in Berlin shows a big fist over a caricature of Winston Churchill, with the caption: "Into the dust with our enemies." In the newspapers, Churchill is rarely called by his real name. He is referred to as "W. C."

A correspondent coming out of Germany invariably hears someone say: "Of course, you cannot report the truth from Berlin."

Just as you cannot tell everything you know from London, you cannot report the full truth from Berlin. Foreign correspondents are told Germany is at war, and there are certain things which may not be cabled out of the country. At present, these military restrictions are severe. There are similar rules in all war capitals.

The German control of the news is at the source. That is, it is difficult to find anyone of official status who will speak freely about everything. All officials know what they may say and what they may not say.

No Restriction on Questions

Correspondents are so well acquainted with these limitations that the daily press conferences in the propaganda ministry and the foreign office are usually confined to questions which the spokesman is ready to answer. There is no restriction on asking questions. But correspondents know so well the type of questions which bring the answer, "nichts bekannt" (nothing known) that they just do not bother to ask them any more.

In the matter of transmitting dispatches from Berlin, there is a military censorship on material cabled direct from Berlin to New York. However, correspondents are permitted to call Bern, Switzerland, on the telephone and transmit dispatches for relay to New York.

The rule laid down by the German authorities is that a correspondent is permitted to send whatever he pleases, but he must take full responsibility for his dispatch. If it doesn't please some one in the propaganda ministry or the foreign office, the correspondent is called on the carpet and asked to explain. In extreme cases, if the explanation doesn't suit the officials, the correspondent may be asked to leave the country.

In the early days of British air raids on Berlin, the propaganda ministry conducted tours to the points of the city involved as soon as the "all clear" signals were given. As restrictions were increased, the tours were discontinued.

Correspondents' reports of air raids now must conform to the communique. That is a military restriction.

One correspondent was cautioned because he had reported he heard a bomb whistle down near the place where he was standing. The officials argued that since the correspondent named the place where he was watching the raid the British would be able to learn approximately where one of their bombs had fallen.

One night, a small bomb fell on an apartment next door to the apartment where I was sleeping and only 200 yards from an important government building. It was not mentioned in the communique and therefore could not be reported.

The Nazi method for influencing public opinion has shown itself in a number of ways. If a building is damaged by a bomb, a gang of night workmen is called out as soon as the raid is over and sets out to clear up the damage as quickly as possible, so the people will not gather about the wreckage. Even windows are replaced, whenever possible, during the night.

Freight Engine and Cars Topple Into Blair Road

TRAINMAN KILLED UNDER ENGINE. Top—Scene of freight train crash yesterday at Lamond Station, Takoma Park, D. C., after locomotive and caboose had toppled from the B. & O. tracks to Blair Road 15 feet below. Crumpled tank car was left hanging half-way over the grade. tracks, told this story of the crash.

"I saw a trainman waving a red flag behind the halted train. Then I heard the freight coming.

"The first thing I knew the freight engine went through the caboose of the work train. The caboose caught fire. The engine crashed through the caboose to the tank car beyond.

"It mounted the tank until it stood almost vertical, then flopped sideways, rolled down the bank and landed right side up.

"It landed opposite me," said Busser. "I can't describe the sound. There was a noise like an explosion and steam poured out of the engine and enveloped the road."

Busser said he jumped out of his car, fearing the tank car would explode.

He said he saw the trainman who tried to flag the freight run into the caboose of the work train just before the collision, then leap to safety as the engine struck.

Busser declared the engineer remained in the cab until "just as they crashed," before jumping.

"It was a mystery to me why he didn't jump sooner—the must have thought he could stop in time. When he did, it was too late: the engine fell on him and killed him. I saw him under the wheels."

Busser, who is a wholesale manager for the Good Humor Ice Cream Co., said the train was traveling at not more than 15 or 20 miles an hour when it struck.

The brakeman said Snyder began desperately to halt the train as soon as he saw the trainman wave his flag.

The brakeman said he chose the east side of the train from which to jump because he had a hunch it would topple down the embankment, which it did.

He sai dhe was unable to judge at what distance before the crash the engineer first saw the flagman or how fast the train was traveling.

Members of the Police Rescue Squad and the Potomac Electric Power Co. removed Snyder's body from beneath the rear wheels of the locomotive after working for nearly two hours and after workmen had cut through the engine truck and axles with torches.

Snyder, an employe of the B. & O. for 35 years, leaves a wife and two children.

Club and 6 Lumber Firms Indicted For Price Fixing

San Francisco, Feb. 26 (AP).—A luncheon club and six manufacturers of redwood lumber were indicted and fined $20,000 for price fixing today.

The rapid fire action climaxed a series of indictments against building concerns in the San Francisco Bay area, charging violations of the Sherman antitrust law.

By agreement, those indicted entered pleas of nolo contendere, subjecting them to punishment without admission of guilt. Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure fined each corporation $2,500 and levied the maximum fine of $5,000 against the Redwood Lunch Club.

The indictment charged the club issued price lists which were quoted by the six corporations.

The corporations are the Pacific Lumber Co., Hammond Redwood Co., Union Lumber Co., Holmes-Eureka Lumber Co., Dolbeer & Carson Lumber Co. and the Redwood Manufacturers Co.

Nazi Envoy Gives Argentina Warning

Buenos Aires, Feb. 26 (U.P.)—German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann, who returned from Berlin several days ago, tonight warned Argentina that her trade relations with the United States have no future, and that American aid to Great Britain is only a British "dream." The ambassador cautioned Argentina not to forget Japan, who is "now on our side."

Von Thermann made his statements to the press, pointing out that postwar Germany would become the biggest buyer of Argentine goods, and asking that the Argentines treat Germans in Argentina with "common respect."

Channel 'Sky Full of Planes —All British'

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London (Thursday), Feb. 27.—All day Wednesday and again Wednesday night British planes pounded away at the German-occupied Channel ports.

One squadron leader said, "The sky over the Channel was full of planes—all British."

The British said they had sent over a squadron of bombers with fighter escorts to bomb Calais Wednesday afternoon. At the same time there were other reports of raids by day Tuesday on the Flushing submarine facilities, by night Tuesday and early Wednesday on the Ruhr and by night on Boulogne and Calais. There was much German antiaircraft fire and one British fighter is missing. The pilot was seen to bail out near the French coast.

British fighters made what the air ministry called an offensive sweep over the Channel Wednesday.

It was reported unofficially last night that British planes could be heard droning toward the French coast and the noise was followed by flashes on the other side of the Channel.

According to the Air Ministry, Wednesday's engagement was almost completely one-sided. The British pounded Calais with scarcely any German planes to interfere. Only three British fighters fired shots, it was said, and all these were at long range.

The raid on Flushing on Tuesday was carried out by a single bomber.

Industrial targets in the Ruhr and airports in occupied France also were attacked Tuesday night and early Wednesday. Separate attacks also were made on Boulogne, Dunkerque and Calais by the coastal command. One bomber is missing.

The air ministry tonight gave out a story of a pilot of a Blenheim fighter-bomber on what has come to be known as offensive patrol—that means a patrol directed against German bombers in their own lairs—over France. He was over the German airport for nearly an hour. He first saw a German plane landing and dropped a bomb on the flare path just ahead of it. Five minutes later he saw the German plane coming in and dived on it. He saw his tracer bullets hitting the enemy plane which then disappeared.

Apparently the pilot continued circling the airport. Fifteen minutes later he attacked another German plane which broke away with its lights out. Seven minutes later he had his last engagement with still another German plane when he dropped three bombs, one on the path of his flare and two on a "troublesome searchlight" which then went out. Then he came home.

Better Beef to Make Soldier Boys Beefier

More and fancier meat for American doughboys was forecast yesterday in an announcement by the Office of Production Management that agreement had been reached with the livestock industry for the purchase of a wider variety of meat products.

The statement of extended weight ranges and liberalization of grades which will be bought, made by OPM director of purchases, Donald M. Nelson, noted that, in general, soldiers will get meat or protein foods at 18 of their 21 weekly meals.

Breakfast, he said, will include bacon or eggs or both, or some other meat. Five days a week there will be beef, lamb or pork at the midday meal, with an average of one-half pound per man.

On Friday noon, Nelson said, fresh fish will be served, and, to conserve an Army tradition of long standing, the soldier will get baked beans Saturday noon.

On an average, the Army will be served only two meatless suppers a week, the OPM stated.

Dies Group Sets Up Offices In 13 Cities

Establishment of regional offices in 13 cities was announced last night by the Dies Committee as a move to combat fifth column activity.

The offices will be set up in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul, St. Louis, New Orleans, El Paso, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

Committee aides said investigators will be assigned to each city, with as many as six agents on duty in some of these "strategic points." Investigators will be instructed "to cooperate actively with all local enforcement agencies and patriotic labor and civic organizations."

The committee statement reported a "highly satisfactory" working arrangement with local law enforcement agencies in a number of States.

"In view of the small appropriation which Congress has given us, and the wholly inadequate staff with which we are compelled to work," the committee continued, "we must rely to a large extent upon the splendid cooperation which we have received from local enforcement agencies." The House three weeks ago granted the committee an appropriation of $150,000.

The committee expressed itself as "deeply grateful" for assistance from local authorities and organizations cooperating "in combating the fifth column."

In an apparent thrust at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which has been accused of minimizing aid received from State and local police, the committee statement concluded:

"We feel that where a Federal agency secured information from a local enforcement agency full credit should be given to that local agency."

Many Practices Of Insurance Companies Hit

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The temporary National Economic Committee released yesterday a report on life insurance companies by two members of the Securities and Exchange Commission staff which finds that funds of many policyholders are "in jeopardy" because of "flagrant cases of conflict (of interest) and breach of trust" by company directors and calls present methods of electing these directors "an undemocratic situation."

Both Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, of the committee and Chairman Frank . the SEC were careful to point out that the staff report in no way committed them or necessarily represented their views.

Suggestions Criticized

E. E. Rhodes, vice president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Newark, N. J., speaking as a member of a committee of life insurance executives, last night issued a statement criticizing investment suggestions in the report.

At the same time, Chairman O'Mahoney observed that "by and large, the insurance companies have come through this study in pretty good shape."

The long heralded report, whose main findings were revealed in The Post November 3, 1940, surveys the operations of 365 legal reserve life insurance companies with total assets exceeding $28,000,000 and more than 124,000,000 policies outstanding with a face amount of approximately $111,000,0000,000.

The authors of the study were Gerhard A. Gesell, special counsel, and Ernest J. Howe, chief financial adviser to the insurance section of the SEC.

"Staggering" Size

Calling the life insurance business one of "staggering" size, the researchers examined the size and growth of the companies, studied their methods of investment, their control and their sales policies and, in fact, covered the entire broad field of insurance company operations.

The report also charged that:

1. Directors of mutual companies are "completely self-perpetuating" so that "it cannot be said that the policyholders have any control over the management of the mutual companies."

2. Present election systems give policyholders "no effective recourse" against directors whose actions they disapprove.

3. Some life insurance directors use their offices for personal gain, such as by borrowing money from the life insurance company or by inducing it to invest in enterprises in which they are financially interested. The report stated, however, that directors of large companies were less prone to actions of this kind than directors of smaller companies.

4. Life insurance companies, chiefly through the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, maintain a "clandestine" lobby that is powerful and effective in fighting legislation it considers inimical. The lobby's influence was said to extend "from the initial election of State representatives to the building up of propaganda through the artificial stimulation of policyholders."

5. The five largest companies interlock with about 780 corporations, while each director is—on the average—a director of six other corporations. Many of these directors also are directors of banks in which the companies have deposits.

6. Life insurance agents are under too much pressure to sell policies, have too little opportunity to render service. The report says "unfit" agents must be replaced by agents with a "professional" approach and that "economic and management pressure on the agent to sell more and more life insurance must be reduced.

Drastic Reform Urged

7. Industrial insurance, owing to high cost and a large number of lapsed policies, has "failed to fulfill its essential purpose" and must be either "eliminated or the traditional method of conducting it must be drastically changed to eradicate its inherent weaknesses."

8. Life insurance companies are "face to face" with the problem of earning enough interest to meet policy guarantees.

The report concludes with a suggestion that insurance companies should invest some of their vast funds in common stocks and should reconsider the traditional insurance company preference for bonds and mortgages.

"With the tremendous increase in assets which has taken place even during the last 10 years," the report states, "the problem of putting funds to work at a satisfactory rate has become more acute. Anxious to maintain their investments in high-grade bonds they have not been able to find outlets for their funds at a rate of interest which is satisfactory to them in the light of their policy contract commitments. Vast sums of money have been sterilized and withdrawn from our capital markets, or routed into channels of investment already suffering from a surfeit of excess credit."

The authors say also that "there is merit in the proposition that if American enterprises were less burdened with corporate debt they would be more flexible and in a better position to adjust their operations in changing economic and business circumstances."

The researchers concluded that "the companies' effort to make riskless investments are the very things which are making their investments more risky."

Life insurance funds must be put to work as equity for the stimulation of new enterprises, must be accessible to small and medium-sized business and must flow into common stocks, it was said.

Chairman O'Mahoney, after saying the companies "have come through this study in pretty good shape," added.

"Of course, they are not perfect, as no human institution is perfect, and facts are set forth which may indicate better methods of doing business."

Commenting on the report's remarks about investment practices, O'Mahoney said he did not believe the companies' assets should be invested "in any but soundest investments," but that "we are faced with the problem of finding some means of financing new enterprises."

Insurance Official Criticizes Report

In response to inquiries from the press, E. E. Rhodes, vice president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. of Newark, N. J., made the following comment on the report submitted by the Securities and Exchange Commission:

"The report submitted by the Securities and Exchange Commission to the Temporary National Economic Committee on the subject of life insurance relates to only one major subject which has not already been covered by the statement on life insurance which was filed with the committee on August 13, 1940, and which bears the signature of 178 United States life insurance companies.

"The suggestion that life insurance funds be invested as venture or risk capital in new enterprise, which is the only new subject of importance, has been a matter of discussion for a great many years. Many States prohibit investment in common stocks by life insurance companies; in fact, in 1906, the Armstrong Committee, of which the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes was counsel, said in its report to the New York Legislature:

"'Investments in stocks should be prohibited. They are fundamentally objectionable, as the corporation, instead of holding a secured obligation acquires a proprietary interest in another business, with rights subject to all indebtedness which may be created in the conduct of it and often direct liabilities as stockholders. This interest must be nourished and supported. Instead of being a creditor with adequate security, to which upon default the corporation may resort, it assumes the responsibilities of proprietorship and must contribute from the accumulations provided by the policyholders in order to sustain the enterprise.'

Charge SEC Ignored Report

"During the boom times of the 20s there was renewed agitation, but sober discussion served to preserve to life insurance policyholders the prevailing strict investment requirements and, happily, the disaster which might have then been incurred was avoided. Policyholders will have little patience with a proposal that funds set aside for their widows and orphans or for their own security in old age, shall be made available for the stimulation of new enterprises which have not proved their worth. It must not be overlooked that life insurance companies with respect to the investment of funds entrusted to their care are in the same position as trustees and other fiduciary institutions."

Rhodes spoke as a member of a committee of life insurance executives which includes Leroy A. Lincoln, president, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Laurence F. Lee, president, Occidental Life Insurance Co. (of North Carolina); Thomas A. Phillips, president, Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Co., and M. Albert Linton, president, Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. This committee prepared a statement of 107 printed pages which was signed by the 178 life insurance companies for incorporation in the record of the Temporary National Economic Committee.

"It is difficult to understand," Rhodes added, "why the report of the Securities and Exchange Commission altogether ignores such an important statement on life insurance."

House Group For Permanent Reports Office

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments yesterday voted 13 to 5 to give permanent status to the Office of Government Reports and authorize annual appropriations of $1,500,000 for the information and research agency.

The committee acted on the bill, introduced by Chairman O'Leary (Democrat), of New York, after receiving a statement from President Roosevelt that the Office of Government Reports, now operated with relief funds, has become "an essential part" of the executive establishment.

Lowell Mellett, director of the reports office, testified before the committee that the Administration has "absolutely no plans" for censorship of press or radio.

He made the assertion in response to a question from O'Leary, who said critics of the bill had expressed fear that the reports office was a potential agency for censorship.

Asked by Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, whether his statement held good in the event America goes to war, Mellett replied:

"I do not believe any censorship is contemplated in wartime. That does not mean that there will not be a military censorship in certain respects, as there always has been and as I presume there always will be. The Army and Navy always have control of the information emanating from their departments."

Whatever restrictions might be placed on military information in time of war, Mellett added, "it would not be the kind of censorship we see abroad."

Mellett, a former Washington newspaper executive, said development of the defense program has brought an enormous increase in the volume of inquiries handled by his office. In the State offices of the agency, which now number 34, inquiries from businessmen and others interested in the defense program increased as much as four-fold from August to January, he stated.

Mellett explained that the reports office provides "a single central clearing house" in Washington for inquiries concerning all phases of Government activity and, through its Division of Press Intelligence, supplies Government officials with a day-by-day digest of newspaper articles and opinion. The State offices, he said, serve as region clearing houses of information on Federal activity and supply Washington with reports of Federal activity in the field and State legislation affecting Federal agencies.

Mellett denied that the office has served or is intended to serve as a medium for "propaganda" and insisted that it does not duplicate the work of press and information divisions in other Government agencies. Under the O'Leary bill, the office would employ 507 persons, he said. It now has 366 employes and an appropriation of $748,490 for the current fiscal year.

House Speeds $1,533,439,702 Supplemental Defense Bill

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Funds to augment the two-ocean Navy with a chain of island outposts and a fleet of armed merchantmen and patrol craft were recommended to the House yesterday in a $1,533,439,702 emergency appropriation bill.

The measure, fourth supplemental defense bill of the session, would care for immediate needs of the Army and Navy expansion programs, and perhaps, a Democratic leader declared, provide some of the weapons which would be furnished to Great Britain under the pending lend-lease bill.

Debate was begun on the bill as it reached the floor from the House Appropriations Committee, under plans of the leadership to pass the measure today.

A major project of the bill is the development of naval and air bases at Samoa and other islands in the Atlantic and Pacific, including some of the British-leased sites. An appropriation of $4,700,000 for development of patrol plane operating facilities at Guam in the Far Pacific is also recommended.

The Navy's $838,321,702 share of the bill would also provide funds to start construction of 400 submarine chasers, and other small patrol craft, and begin arming merchant ships and the installation of protective gear against magnetic mines on such craft.

Most of the Army outlay of $695,118,000 is for building cantonments and air bases. A total of $338,800,000 is included to complete projects for which the original cost estimates proved too low.

The Appropriations Committee made public, as the bill was reported, testimony given in executive session by ranking officials of the Army and Navy.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, told the group that he considered the danger of an invasion of the United States to be less imminent than a year ago. Then, he said, "we would have been in a somewhat helpless plight . . . had the control of the Atlantic passed to an enemy."

He admitted to the committee that the Army had not been entirely ready for the huge armament program dropped in its lap last year.

"Frankly," he stated, "e had not anticipated that the American people would ever be sufficiently aroused to authorize in time of peace such a tremendous program for the national defense, nor had we anticipated the complete collapse of the French government in early June, along with the deadly hazard to the British of a transfer of French naval power to Germany and Italy."

These developments, Marshall said, required many changes in Army plans, some of which could not be ordered immediately. The General Staff, he stated, had to obtain the facts of what happened abroad and study them "in order to benefit to the full by the lessons indicated."

Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, told the committee in the closed hearings that "at the moment" he considered it inadvisable to transfer any more destroyers to the British as advocated by Wendell Willkie.

But, he quickly added, "certain emergency conditions might arise under which we might want to make certain transfers" and therefore we should not "tie our hands" now against such moves.

The statement that some of the arms provided in the bill might be transferred to Britain was made on the floor by Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, who is in charge of the measure. He told questioners that as much as 50 per cent of the weapons might be subject to transfer but that no precise estimate had been made.

Shortage Probe Leads to Dismissal

The District Commissioners yesterday dismissed a third woman employe in the municipal government "for the good of the service" following a meeting where shortages amounting to $10,000 in dog license revenues was discussed.

Two women were dismissed on February 17 also for the "good of the service" following a meeting on the reported shortage. The discharged woman was a junior clerk-stenographer in the tax collector's office.

OPM to Set Up Defense Labor Mediation Unit

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A national defense labor mediation board, consisting of public, labor and management representatives, will be set up in the Office of Production Management within the next two weeks to meet a growing threat of strikes in defense industries, it was learned reliably yesterday.

The board is intended as the answer to inadequate facilities of the labor division of the National Advisory Commission. Individual members of the board, it is planned, will work with the United States Conciliation Service in seeking to avert strikes in the field and the board itself will propose formulas and suggestions for settlements.

Under the plan, the board will consist of 11 members, 3 being prominent individuals with neither labor nor management connections, 4 representatives of industry and 4 representatives of organized labor, 2 each from the A. F. of L. and C. I. O.

The board, it is proposed, would inherit the prestige and powers of the Defense Commission and OPM but would depend only on its persuasive ability and public opinion to maintain labor peace. Among its functions, it is believed, would be the formulation of acceptable labor practices and the publication of fact-finding reports after it had examined the details of actual or threatened strikes.

The board's operations, as now contemplated, would begin when the Conciliation Service referred to it a dispute in which the latter was unable to make progress. Cooperating with the conciliation commissioner on the job, one or more members of the new board would go to the scene of the trouble and meet with the parties to the dispute.

This procedure would be similar to that now practiced by members of the Defense Commission labor staff except that the members of the new board would act in a more formalized and orderly fashion and would speak officially for the defense program and its executives.

29th's Payday To Be Payless This Month

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent.

Fort Meade, Md., Feb. 26.—Men of the Twenty-ninth Division will have a payless pay day at the end of their first month in Federal service Friday, it was learned today.

Most of the men, probably 90 per cent, will be paid by the end of next week, the post finance office said. The remainder will receive theirs early the second week in March.

Officers who are paid by check instead of cash, and who return their own pay vouchers, may be paid on time, or with little delay. The task of compiling and auditing company pay rolls for the men, however, has proved too much of a task to be accomplished since the division was inducted.

During that time, scattered companies, batteries and regiments were brought together, examined physically and transported here.

Infantry regiments spent today in basic, squad and platoon training which included pitching shelter tents, extended order drill and defense against aircraft. On all infantry areas, troops marched in open formation, with points ahead and flankers out at the sides.

At a whistle signal from one of the points or flankers, the men scattered, flung themselves to the ground and snapped their rifles at imaginary planes overhead. Drills were conducted with companies reduced to a handful of men, one officer and one to two noncommissioned officers. The others are absent at special schools.

Gunnery Instruction

One of these is the noncommissioned officers' school conducted by Lieut. Col. Edwin Cox, executive officer of the Eighty-eighth Brigade. Its pupils, noncoms from all Infantry regiments and the District's 121st Engineers, today received instruction in use of the bayonet and in protecting a command during marches.

Another, one of the busiest in camp, is the Infantry Weapons School, where 256 officers and men are undergoing five weeks of instruction in light and heavy machine guns, mortars, antitank guns and Garand rifles under Lieut. Col. F. O. Wickham, formerly of the Nineteenth Infantry and the last Indian fighter in the Army.

Col. Wickham took part as a sergeant in Troop K, Fifth Cavalry, in battle October 28, 1907, with a band of 600 Navajos under a chief with an unpronouncable name on the San Juan River in Utah. He has little patience with misdirected enthusiasm.

"Take it easy," he bellowed through a loud-speaker system set high on a windy hill near the old gymnasium, "walk to your positions. You can run when you learn what to do so well you won't make any mistakes."

There won't be any stunts like stripping and assembling a machine gun blindfolded this time, as in 1918, he explains. The time for stunts has passed.

Col. Wickham was high in praise of the spirit and willingness of officers and men alike. They'll learn, he said, "because they want to learn."

Democrats Defend Housing Costs Called 'Unreasonable'

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

High costs of building Army cantonments were criticized and defended in the House yesterday in connection with the supplemental national defense supply bill which carries $15,000,000 for construction and equipment in this area.

Republicans recalled World War scandals on construction contracts, while Democrats sought to defend the $1,000,000,000 building program on the ground that the need for haste and winter weather forced the Government to pay more than normally would have been necessary.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, charged that the national defense program has been shot through with "unreasonable costs and unreasonable delays" which could have been avoided.

The Appropriations Committee in its report, however, pointed to the magnitude of the job of building 186 cantonments throughout the country to house and train 1,418,000 men at once and remarked:

"It is easy to criticize and to find fault, but fairness compels a bestowal of commendation for the sincere, determined effort to do the best possible kind of construction job under the worst possible conditions both as to expedition and cost.

"It is highly commendable that the camps are being completed in good time with the finest accommodations, equipment and facilities that have been furnished to any expeditiously expanded Army."

Fort Meade, Md., and Fort Belvoir, Va., were singled out during executive hearings on the bill as examples of excessive expenditures. A heavy labor turnover, plus bad weather, were blamed in an Army report for high costs at Fort Meade. Committee members expressed amazement that land around Fort Belvoir should cost the Government an average of $340.51 an acre.

Labor costs at Fort Meade, the Army report stated, were 40 per cent higher than expected because of the necessity of trying out workers who claimed to be skilled only to dismiss them and of the shortage of a competent subsupervisory staff.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, while admitting the high costs, expressed the opinion that there has been no "wasting of public money" in the cantonment construction.

He confessed, moreover, that the unexpected collapse of France and the suddenness of the adoption of selective service in this country had caught the Army not thoroughly prepared.

Gen. Marshall said that the Army had discovered no evidence of "speculation or attempts to increase costs."

"On the other hand," he added, "I have had many indications to show that the contractors are trying their level best. Certainly, they have been working under appalling weather conditions and they must also overcome the difficulties due to great expansion, overtime, shift work and inefficient labor."

Altogether the bill, which is expected to be passed by the House today, carries $338,000,000 for completing construction of 186 cantonment and other defense housing projects.

At Fort Meade, $6,918,323 will be spent. Of this, $1,150,000 is for a sewage disposal plant, more than $1,000,000 more roads and walks, and $2,085,068 for utilities.

At Fort Belvoir, $664,000 more is to be spent on purchases of 1,800 additional acres of land. Army authorities asked $882,000 more than was originally estimated for construction of a water and sewer system.

Approximately $4,000,000 will be needed to complete construction at Fort Belvoir, Army engineers testified.

Included in the bill are the following appropriations for this area:

Wind tunnel building and accessories to test naval aircraft at Carderock, Md., $500,000.

Additional ordnance manufacturing facilities at Washington Navy Yard, $960,000.

Aviation facilities, including building and equipment, Naval Air Station at Anacostia, $1,250,000.

Additional aviation facilities at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., $95,000.

Acquistion of land and development of landing field for aircraft spotting tests, Dahlgren, Va., $520,0000.

Research facilities including buildings and accessories, at Naval Research Laboratory, Bellevue, $309,000.

Army appropriations are lumped in the bill, but testimony before the committee indicated the following expenditures in this area other than at Forts Meade and Belvoir:

Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds, $3,894,128; Edgewood Arsenal, Md., $551,066; Fort Eustis, Va., $605,490.

Bolling Field, $303,950, for additional facilities, and $157,000 more to complete an auxiliary field at Frederick, Md.

Lubin Urges Dismissal-Wage Tax to Prevent Post-War Crash

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A special tax on all defense contractors, to pay "dismissal wages" to employes dropped when the rearmament program tapers off, was advocated yesterday by Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

The high-ranking New Dealer solmenly warned the Temporary National Economic Committee that "a catastrophe is inevitable" unless a "conscious effort is made to meet the depression threatened by future cessation in the demand for munitions.

For the years 1941 and 1942, however, Lubin painted a rosy picture of perhaps the largest national income in history. At the high point of the defense program, he said, American industry will be employing 4,000,000 more workers than today. There has already been a jump of 2,200,000 in employment figures since May, he asserted.

But when the abnormal demand for defense materials ceases to exist, Lubin indicated that unemployment will necessarily follow.

To "cushion" this shock, Lubin proposed that "every defense contract contain a provision for the establishment of a special defense dismissal fund from which dismissal wages should be paid to workers who are let out when the defense program slackens."

Lubin suggested that the dismissal wage be paid for by a special tax of perhaps 5 per cent, levied on all prime or subcontractors in defense industries. The fund thus built up would be kept separate from present social security funds, and would be paid to the workers in weekly amounts for a length of time depending on the duration of his employment in defense activities. Regular unemployment insurance payments provided in existing law would follow the "dismissal wage" payments.

Under Lubin's plan, workers would be allowed to make voluntary contributions to the insurance fund if they wished.

Chairman O'Mahoney of the TNEC indicated disapproval of Lubin's tax proposal on the ground that it was not a fundamental solution of the problem.

In addition to the compulsory dismissal wage for defense workers, the commissioner suggested that Congress extend the period of eligibility for unemployment compensation under the Social Security Act to "at least 26 weeks." Present maximum is 18 weeks.

Lubin told the committee that the $17,000,000,000 appropriated or authorized by Congress for defense expenditures would mean 8,300,000 man-years of employment, of which 3,250,000 would be in skilled work.

Lubin asserted that the problem of the post-defense depression "is greater than unaided private enterprise can be expected to meet." He urged strengthening the antimonopoly work of the Justice Department, and advocated measures "to reduce barriers to interstate trade and to restore the competitive pricing of consumers' goods at the retail as well as the wholesale level."

Devoting the major part of his testimony to prices, Lubin, who is a Labor Department representative on the T. N. E. C., said: "Don't tinker with prices any more than is absolutely necessary." But if price controls must be imposed, he strongly urged that the proper agency for the task is Government and not private enterprise.

Lubin told the committee not to be "too readily impressed by claims that prices must go up because wage rates do." He said that "as far as total costs of production are concerned, costs and wage rates have even been known to move in opposite directions."

G-Men Help Trace Divvens Killing Clews

Morganton, N. C., Feb. 26 (U.P.).—Police believed tonight that the slayer of two Uniontown, Pa., men had killed the second one—Thaddeus Florkiewicz, 26—because he had been badly burned when their automobile caught fire.

The car belonged to Robert S. Divvens, formerly of Washington, who was robbed and slain near Bowling Green, Va., the day before Florkiewicz' body was discovered. Both men had been shot through the chest with a .38 Colt automatic, using snub-nosed bullets.

The interior of the car was badly burned and Florkiewicz' coat, vest and overcoat were found between the machine and a nearby lake. Police Chief Von Duckworth said he believed the cold-blooded killer shot down Florkiewicz, knowing the latter's injuries would hamper their escape.

City police, working with two agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, were piecing together the meager clews.

Police Chief J. P. Coffey, of nearby Valdese reported he had seen Florkiewicz and another man parked in Valdese Monday afternoon. He did not pay much attention to the two, he said, but remembered that the third man was "about 40 years old."

Filling station employes between here and Bowling Green were being questioned in hopes that one of them could furnish a more detailed description of the killer. Police refused to say whether they had any new leads in the case, or any suspects.

The car was examined thoroughly today and three bullet holes were found. One of the bullets had been fired from inside the car, while the other two were fired into the car from the outside. It was believed the shots might have been fired when Divvens was robbed and slain.

Duckworth said he believed any break in the case would have to come from Uniontown because investigating authorities suspected that a mutual acquaintance of Divvens and Florkiewicz might have been responsible for the double-murder.

PlansMade toRush Arms to Britain

war sinews the United States can spare in order so that they can be shipped to the docks without any loss of time when the green light is given by Congress.

Britain has listed long-range bombers, ships, field guns, machine guns, ammunition and a host of supplies which are needed quickly, and some informed officials today expressed the opinion that about $500,000,000 worth of material would be shipped as soon as Congress acts.

The military situation in Europe also was canvassed at the White House meetings. Official information reaching Washington continues to indicate that a major German move may be expected at any time.

Although Administration sources said that shipments will be undertaken as soon as the legislation is adopted, Army and Navy chiefs also are preparing requests for appropriations and authorizations for defense factories and materials to be constructed or acquired in connection with the lease-lend program.

In general, those who went to the White House were disposed to give away no defense secrets or any facts which might be interpreted as secrets. Some merely would not talk. Sir Hugh Dowding told reporters:

"I don't talk to the President and then come out and tell what was discussed."

Forrestal remarked, laughing:

"I speak only Chinese."

Later in the afternoon the President saw Gano Dunn, senior production consultant of the OPM. Dunn presented to the President a report upon "the adequacy of the steel industry for national defense under conditions of maintaining civil consumption." The President will reveal the gist of this report on Friday, Dunn said.

Mr. Roosevelt also received William Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, who discussed with the Executive the opening September 1 by his radio chain of a reciprocal service with all Latin-American countries except Honduras and Haiti.

Paley said Mr. Roosevelt appeared greatly interested in plans for interchange of programs through local stations in the Americas, linked into a network with 64 local outlets.

"The important thing is that each of these stations has agreed to carry a minimum of one hour a day of broadcasts from the United States, which will give us a dominant position in Latin America, as compared with any other nation," Paley declared.

"The Germans, of course, have purchased time on the radio, but we will have the dominant position with this arrangement."

Paley said that United States programs will be sent to Latin America by short wave and rebroadcast by local stations on their normal wave lengths.

Tears Flow Freely At Slaying Inquest dren's on the committee—wrote the answers for those two institutions.

William C. Kirkpatrick, then president of GHA, took strong issue with the District Medical Society in March, 1938, for its refusal to permit members to consult with the cooperative's staff doctors. Dr. Thomas E. Neill, at that time head of the society and now a defendant, replied that the purpose of Kirkpatrick's letter was "to create in the public mind an erroneous impression."

Dr. Warfield reported to the society on April 6, 1938, that "all of the local private hospitals are cooperating fully with the Medical Society in respect to GHA. At the present time only one of the local hospitals has on its staff list the name of a physician connected with GHA."

Similar evidence is to be presented to the 13-member jury today, its general purpose being to prove that the hospitals were induced by the medical society and certain of its leaders to keep G. H. A. doctors out.

After an all-day recess Tuesday, the trial entered its fourth week yesterday minus one of the two alternate jurors, who is confined to his home by illness.

Col. Randall testified that he was favorably impressed with Group Health Association after visiting its I Street clinic and attending the Hotel Mayflower banquet on the eve of its opening in November, 1937.

He expressed himself accordingly to the Homeopathic Hospital trustees when they held a meeting three days after the Federal Workers' Cooperative began taking patients but to no avail.

Reading from the minutes of that meeting, John Henry Lewin, of the prosecution, told the jury:

"The board held open discussion on the subject and decided that, as long as this clinic is not accepted by the District Medical Society, we cannot recognize it. They pay the doctors' salaries, charge monthly fees, do no charity work and the men on their medical staff are not recognized by the District Medical Society."

Seven of the trustees voted, as recommended by Dr. Custis, that none but D. M. S. members should be admitted to the Homeopathic medical staff and two balloted against.

Col. Randall said that when they voted the trustees had in mind G. H. A. physicians, barred from membership in the District Medical Society.

A special agent of the FBI was called to the stand to establish that handwritten answers on the Children's and Garfield Hospitals' questionnaires matched the writing of Dr. Warfield. He was George W. Dingle.

The questionnaire was sent to local hospitals by the medical society a short time after the cooperatives went into operation for the purpose of determining whether any of the institutions had G. H. A. men on their staffs and if there were any staff doctors not affiliated with the society or the American Medical Association.

Among witnesses called yesterday by the Government to identify documents were Dr. J. Lawn Thompson, former chairman of the D. M. S. executive committee; Dr. F. C. Fishback, former secretary of the Washington Academy of Surgery; Mrs. Edna H. Treasure, superintendent of National Homeopathic Hospital, and B. Brent Sandidge, superintendent of Emergency Hospital.

Several were questioned by Walton Allen and Compton Timberlake, making their debuts in the presentation of the Government's case, which is in charge of Grant W. Kelleher and Lewin.

Opponents Win New Curb on Presidential Powers in Aid Bill

The day's acid debate, sharply reversing Administration strategy of tolerant silence, was touched off by an opposition attack on President Roosevelt's Tuesday press conference statements.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, applied the match. He asserted that the President made "a shocking statement" when he said proposals for peace must await a British victory and the first thing was to win the war. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, added that the President "practically said, 'yes, we are in the war.'"

In the series of clashes that followed, Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, closed with Wheeler, and Senator George locked horns with Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota. Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan disputed later assertions by Wheeler. Then the row flared anew in debate between Wheeler and Majority Leader Barkley over just what the President said.

Will Answer Critics

As the curtain rang down on the brisk day of debate, Barkley told reporters that supporters of the bill have remained quiet to speed action, but in the future "we are not going to let wild statements go unanswered."

In the bout between Chandler and Wheeler, the Kentucky Democrat charged the Montanan with "trying to undermine the confidence of the American people in their President." Wheeler reiterated that the Administration was trying to "flim-flam the public."

Senator George, bluntly challenging statements by Nye, accused opponents of the bill of stirring up war sentiment in the country by their repeated assertion that the bill put this country in the war. Its purpose, George vehemently asserted, was just the reverse. Not "the comparatively few war mongerers," but opponents of the bill, were drumming up a war attitude by their statements, he said.

Barkley declared Wheeler misinterpreted the President's press conference statements. He said the President obviously meant he favored no peace proposals until England had won, but definitely did not mean "we are going in the war." Barkley said this Government had no business asking England to negotiate a peace with the man "who has brought on the world this scourge."

Chairman George, until recently confined by illness and now engaging in debate for the first time, tersely called Nye and other Senate opponents to task for their constant repetition of "war bill."

George said the charge was unfounded but reiteration of it by opponents was fanning up a war sentiment.

"It is the unreasoning attitude of men who, simply because they cannot support a bill, read into it things that are not there," snapped George.

George then challenged Nye to say whether he favored any aid to Britain. Nye said he favored aid "within established laws."

"Do you want effective aid that will enable Britain to survive or do you just mean a show of aid as a pretext?" pressed George.

Nye suggested qualifying restrictions and George retorted hotly: "How many more 'ifs' are you going to add? Every time the Senator attaches another 'if.'"

George said no aid would be given England that Congress didn't authorize, and Nye replied that Congress undoubtedly would approve all aid that the President rendered.

"The Senator is afraid Congress will not have stamina enough to resist the President?" asked George.

"I know it won't," said Nye.

"If that is true, then there isn't any purpose in retaining power in Congress," replied George.

The Wheeler-Chandler brush followed the Montanan's charge that both President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie were violating campaign pledges about noninvolvement in war.

Chandler Chides Wheeler

"I don't think any Senator is serving his country by making the people lack confidence in their President," said Chandler.

"What I'm trying to do is to be honest with the American people," said Wheeler. "If this is our war, then we ought to go to war. But I don't think it's our war."

"If the Senator spent as much time trying to build up his Government as he spends trying to tear it down we would be a lot farther from war," said Chandler.

"I believe this is a world revolution. . . . If the President and Secretary of State Hull can't deal with it, then you (Wheeler) can't deal with it. You can muddle and mess things up, but you can't deal with it."

Brown Joins Attack

Wheeler replied that Chandler was "a fighting man from Kentucky and perhaps he would like to carry that gun again."

Senator Brown next sharply disputed Wheeler's assertion that the Democratic platform gave no intimation of the lend-lease bill, and if it had the President would have been defeated.

Quoting aid declarations from both Republican and Democratic platforms, Brown said both parties "stated the general principles on which this bill is based. He accused Wheeler of "setting up bugaboos" as he had against the conscription bill, which Brown himself opposed.

"I still repeat," said Wheeler, "this is an issue of war or peace . . . What is the New Deal inner circle saying. They're saying we're in the war now."

Raises "Personal" Issue

Barkley entered the debate to say that "regardless of what we wish," the world is in the war, of it and affected by it. He charged much of the opposition to the bill is "personal."

"The reason the Senator from Montana is opposing it is because he doesn't want the President to administer it," said Barkley. "But he is going to administer it."

Following adjournment, the Majority Leader said that beginning Monday he hoped to assemble the Senate at an earlier hour, to expedite action.

Barkley told reporters he did not look for any adjournment of Congress this year, because of the war situation.

Buckley to Plead Double Jeopardy In Reopened Case

A motion pleading double jeopardy will be filed at Police Court Tuesday by M. Edward Buckley, 33-year-old attorney, in response to the reopening of a driving while drunk case disposed of last year by a nolle prosequi.

The lawyer, who lives at 3724 Windom Place Northwest, was granted time in which to file a motion when he was arraigned Tuesday before Judge John P. McMahon. Buckley said last night he will present the motion and that it probably will be heard within a few weeks.

Buckley was arraigned Tuesday on a new information charging drunk driving. A similar accusation was nolleprossed last October and he was permitted in January to plead guilty to a substitute charge of driving on the wrong side of the street. He paid a $25 fine on the latter count.

Buckley said last night that he agreed to pay the fine "rather than waste the court's time with a long drunk-driving trial." Had the charge not been nolleprossed, he stated, the prosecution would never have "made" a case.

Discharged Watchman Sues Commissioners

Ernest Messick, 54, 5711 Fourth Street Northwest, sued in the District Court to set aside his discharge from the job of fireman-watchman by the District Commissioners. He also asked $50,000 damages from the Commissioners.

Messick, in a complaint filed by Attorney David L. Riordan, said he worked for the District 10 years before last December 15, when he was questioned about some gasoline cans on his territory. After an informal investigation, the complaint said, the District Commissioners discharged him, withheld $116 due him from the retirement fund and marked his personnel card, "Caught Stealing Gasoline."

Messick asked the court to order the Commissioners to reinstate him, with back pay, to pay him the $116 and to prefer charges of theft and give him a fair hearing. He asked $50,000 damages of the Commissioners personally for the "stealing" memorandum.

Chaplin Files Tax Counterclaim

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Charlie Chaplin appeared in Federal Court today to answer a Government contention that he owes an additional $65,000 tax on his 1935 earnings with a claim that he actually is entitled to a $25,000 refund.

The gray-haired comedian contends he was unjustly taxed on his receipts from United Artists Corporation, of which he, Mary Pickford and others were owners. Those receipts, he claims, were returns on an investment, not income.

Violence Flares in Steel Strike

Thomas Finn, Federal conciliator, who participated in the conferences, issued a statement saying:

"Despite the fact that the strike has been called, our efforts to settle the situation are not stopping. It is too bad that the strike deadline was set so early. If both sides are reasonable, things can still be straightened out. We have no condemnation for either side. After our report to Washington tonight, the next step must come from there."

Here, officials of the OPM had no comment on word that the strike had started. They indicated a statement might be issued today.

Further tension was created as the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers filed, in conformance with Michigan law, a 30-days notice of intent to strike at the Rouge, Highland and Lincoln plants of the Ford Motor Co., employing around 100,000 persons.

This strike, should it materialize, promises to provide a gigantic test of strength between the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor, which also is engaged in a widespread drive to unionize Ford workers.

The strike decision was communicated to President Roosevelt in a message from union officials, who declared that the union is "wholeheartedly in support of our national defense program" and that "if there can be avenues opened for adjustment of our grievances without a strike, we are ready to use those avenues."

At the same time, I. A. Capizzi, Ford Company counsel, declared that "all of the men are satisfied, always have been satisfied and would continue so if they were left alone."

The Ford Company has orders for 4,000 Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines and several thousand "midget" or "pigmy" trucks for the United States Army. It also is to produce parts and subassemblies for bombing planes for the Douglas and Consolidated companies.

Meanwhile, A. F. of L. United Auto Workers returned to their jobs at the Motor Wheel Corporation in Lansing, Mich., after a two-week strike. The company holds $4,000,000 of defense orders.

Elsewhere the Associated Press reported:

Youngstown, Ohio—A crane operators' strike was settled at the Electruc-weld plant of Republic Steel Co. The company makes pipe for defense purposes.

Gary, Ind.—C. I. O. steel union pickets refused to permit nonunion workers to enter the Carnegie Sheet and Tin Mills, which normally employs 9,000.

More nickel was consumed in 1940 in the United States than in any other year.

Committee To Aid Debtor Selectees Here

A special committee to adjust controversies between debtor selectees and their creditors will be organized soon, it was announced yesterday at Washington Selective Service headquarters which also made public names of 138 men who will lead off the March induction here. Also announced were the names of 24 replacements for registrants failing Army induction tests.

After a special conference of draft officials and finance experts in the office of Gen. Albert L. Cox, local selection chief, it was announced Stanley D. Willis, of the District Bankers Association, will undertake to organize the advisory unit.

Designed to assist selectees with credit obligations, the committee will "have the particular province of adjusting controversies between creditors and debtors in cases involving installment contracts of personal property such as automobiles, radios, furniture, etc.," it was said.

"The members of this committee will probably be made associate members of the Registrants Advisory Board," a statement added.

Statement With Questionnaires

Attending the conference besides Gen. Cox, and Willis were: Spencer Gordon, chairman of the Registrants Advisory Board; H. L. McCoy, insurance director in the Veterans Administration; Washington I. Cleveland and R. W. Tupper of the American Automobile Association; Joseph A. Marr, of Crowley & Marr, insurance underwriters; William R. Lichtenberg, attorney; George E. Keneipp, of the Keystone Automobile Club, and A. Burke Summers, Washington Association of Auto Sales Finance Companies.

The officials decided to issue a short statement to be inclosed with questionnaires sent out in the future, urging the registrants to make arrangements with creditors in the event of induction.

"It might be suggested to the registrant that it is possible to transfer the property to a friend, to turn it back to the creditor, or to arrange for the balance of the property, or by agreement with the creditor," it was pointed out after the closed meeting.

The conference report added, "The registrant should be told if he cannot make satisfactory arrangements with his creditor he should consult some member of the Advisory Board in his area."

The names of 138 recruits to be inducted March 3 as well as replacements for the 24 who failed to pass induction examinations follow. (To be announced soon are the names of 40 men from Board No. 20, also to go into uniform March 3.)

(All addresses are northwest unless otherwise stated.)

'What Is Love?' Psychiatrist Tells D. C. Coeds the Answer

When Someone Else Is As Important as You: That's the Real Thing

A Washington woman who was invited to tell the coeds at American University this week about readiness for marriage, yesterday gave an answer to the question: "What is love?"

"It is," she said, "that state in which the satisfaction and security of another person become as significant to one as one's own satisfaction and security."

It represents, she added, "a real growth in personality," and is "an outgoing enriching experience."

The speaker was Mrs. Aileen Burton, chief psychiatric social worker at the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, who spoke to the girls of American University on "Psychological Preparation for Marriage." Part of such preparation she told them is to have reached emotional maturity.

Mrs. Burton talked to the girls Tuesday, in a week of programs devoted to preparation for home-making. Yesterday she expanded her remarks in an interview for The Post.

She named four signs of emotional maturity which will help a person to gauge whether he or she —or the other person—is sufficiently grown up to marry. They are:

Ability to carry responsibility.

Harmonious relationships with others.

An inner strength to sustain one in trying times, without dependence on others.

Ability to bear frustration; that is, to delay satisfaction in the present for greater future satisfaction.

"A person should reach a certain emotional age before marriage," she said. "But the chronological age and the emotional age do not always correlate. A person may be 20 chronologically and only 10 years old emotionally.

AILEEN BURTON

"Although the law does not define what the emotional age must be, a person should be well on the way to maturity before he or she is able to make a wise choice or take such an important step as marriage," she said.

"The intimate daily living of a man and wife in sexual and spiritual harmony is the height of maturity," she said.

Radio Advertising Shows Increase

Radio network advertising increased from $27,000,000 in 1931 to more than $96,000,000 in 1940, John J. Karol, market research sales counsel of the Columbia Broadcasting System, told members of the Advertising Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday afternoon.

Comparing radio of today with radio of ten years ago, from the standpoint of the statistician, Karol said that the listening audience of today numbers more than 28,000,000 families as against 7,000,000 families in 1931.

Paris Bank Robbed In Crime Wave

Vichy, Feb. 26 (U.P.)—A crime wave in Paris, after several minor food riots in the suburbs, was climaxed by a bank robbery in the heart of the city, according to reports reaching here tonight. At the same time serious rioting between gendarmes and scores of reform school youths was reported.

One bank employe was killed and another wounded during the daylight robbery of a downtown Paris bank Tuesday only a few yards from a district police station. The four bandits escaped with 3,700,000 francs.

BLAME YOUR LIVER IF—

So you see how important it is to keep bile flowing freely! And what finer aid could one desire than Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for treating his patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets are unsurpassed in effectiveness because they stimulate liver bile to help digest fatty foods, they tone up muscular intestinal action, at the same time help elimination. Being purely vegetable, Olive Tablets are wonderful! Test their supreme goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. All drugstores.

Do you have to "TUCK YOUR CAR IN" at night?

Not if it's One of these Four New Additions to the Buick SPECIAL Line that Compact Automobile Bigness into Fewer Bumper-to-Bumper Inches

HERE of late the modern automobile has been giving a pretty good imitation of a man getting up in the morning.

It has stretched and s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d—until today you almost have to have a shoehorn to get a car of any size tucked away in the family garage.

We thought something ought to be done about that.

Thought it was time someone built a truly big car—big in ability, in room, in beauty—that was still compact enough, bumper to bumper, to fit your garage without dispossessing the garden tools.

So today in Buick dealers' showrooms you'll see four new models, additions to the 1941 Buick SPECIAL line.

They are typical Buicks on every count—trigger-quick, steady, tireless travelers with a big 115-hp. Buick FIREBALL straight-eight under their bonnets.

They dress every mile you travel in trim Buick style—cradle every yard of distance on soft all-coil springing. They top off every trip with an even greater measure of gasoline economy, thread traffic with a new nimbleness, and when it comes to parking find the proverbial dime roomy as a dance floor.

But by the simple step of compacting all this ability, goodness and value on a 118-inch wheelbase, we've trimmed inches off the over-all length—and dollars off the cost.

We're passing those dollar savings on to you, which makes three reasons for going to see these honeys now: You'll go for their ability—your wife will go for trim size and easy handling—and both will stand up and cheer for the easily-reachable price.

Buick Prices begin at $915 for the Business Coupe delivered at Flint, Mich. State tax, white sidewall tires, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice.

'So Ends Our Night' Is Tragic Tale of Refugees

Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan, Frances Dee And Glenn Ford Have Most to Do With Making New Film on Palace Screen a Notable Drama

"SO ENDS OUR NIGHT. David L. Loew-Albert Lewin picturization for United Artists of Erich Maria Remarque's story of "Flotsam," adapted to the screen by Talbot Jennings, costarring Fredric March and Margaret Sullavan, with Frances Dee, Glenn Ford, Anna Sten, Erich von Stroheim, Allan Brett, Joseph Cawthorn, Leonid Kinskey, Alexander Granach, Roman Bohnen, Sig Rumann, William Stack, Lionel Royce, Ernst Deutsch, Spencer Charters and Hans Schumm. Directed by John Cromwell. At Loew's Palace Theater.

WHILE "SO ENDS OUR NIGHT" manages to extract a considerable meed of "comedy relief" from the predicaments in which those hordes of expatriated and hapless Europeans find themselves for want of a slip of paper known as a passport, it is at base a tense and tragic tale. It betrays no hesitancy in naming the names of those responsible for the imposition of human misery and points a finely emotional story with the poignant experiences of two couples of homeless people—the one a married pair; the other two youngsters who hope to be. It is a drab, delightful, depressing and dramatic recital—if those words can be made to go together.

BELL

To Americans, living in precarious peace and specious security, the developments in the lives of the group of simple and honest people with whom "So Ends Our Night" concerns itself seem almost incomprehensible. Men without the scribbled symbol of nationality and an honorable citizenship in some country or other are reduced to the status of the hunted beast. Husbands and their wives become pariahs, hounded by a relentless tyranny. Young people find romance the road to ruinous persecution. Such are the consequences of Hitlerism on the loose, as expounded in this first of the David L. Loew-Albert Lewin contributions to the cinema's exposition of the disasters of despotism.

It is not a pretty picture that is etched in this "So Ends Our Night," but it is a sensitive, expressive and infinitely entertaining one.

The strip of celluloid unwinding itself on the Palace screen, beginning this morning, has been sagaciously cast. Fredric March and Frances Dee are in the roles of the harried marrieds and more than any other two in the cast epitomize the tragedy of the story. Mr. March forges a passport or two during the goings-on and leaps out of a high window to his voluntary death rather than disclose the accomplices who have made it difficult for the Nazis in the course of the narrative. This, of course, is after he has been present at his wife's deathbed and sees no need for further carrying on. But the real romantic interest of the play centers in Margaret Sullavan and Glenn Ford, the youthful lovers, whose experiences compile the picture's greatest claim to fervid attention. Miss Sullavan, of course, is a known quantity among the films' most accomplished actresses. But this young Mr. Ford is something else again. He won't be for long. His work in this item stamps him as one of the surest candidates for stardom the gelatins have turned up in no end of years. His future is nothing for him or anybody else to worry about. It also is a pleasant feature of "So Ends Our Night" that it restores Joseph Cawthorn to his rightful place among the foremost character comedians of either stage or screen and gives Erich von Stroheim another opportunity to demonstrate that he is one of the best of the cameras' actors. Anna Sten, Leonid Kinskey, Sig Rumann and numerous others also have their moments in the spotlight while this splendid subject is unreeling.

There is more than that to meet the eye on the new bill at the Palace, however. Pete Smith breaks out again with an interesting item in "Penny to the Rescue," another of his extollations of Prudence Penny, who must be a person of some note in Mr. Smith's set. Then there is a comedy cartoon, "The Lonesome Stranger," to while away those extra minutes, and the picturized news events that appealed most strongly to the photographic sense of the "News of the Day" cameraman. The bill is one that can be seen with no consciousness of time wasted.

The Lad Who Came to Stardom

GLENN FORD

who insures his future eminence on the screen by the excellence of his performance with Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan and Frances Dee in "So Ends Our Night," the David L. Loew-Albert Lewin production, opening today on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. It is a drama of the tragedies and the triumphs that stalk the paths of the European refugees

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 26.

Warners can dish it out, but can they take it? Everyone knows that Producer Hal Wallis, executive head of the studio, must get credit.

HOPPER

No one seemed more proud of Mark Hellinger's success than Warners, until recently, when Mark started getting too many headlines, which didn't sit well with his bosses. Mark's name is known throughout America, not only as an ace newspaperman, short story writer, great friend, but as a fine man. Since he's come into pictures he's carved out a success that's pretty enviable.

At Warners he's produced such hits as "It All Came True," "Brother Orchid," "They Drive by Night," "Torrid Zone" and "High Sierra." It was his idea to team George Raft, Humphrey Bogart and Marlene Dietrich in "Hard to Get," which exhibitors are demanding even before the story's finished. That's a guy to be reckoned with, and instead of gratitude, it's vice versa. It would serve 'em right if Mark went over to join Buddy De Sylva at Paramount. But I'm a peace-loving woman—ha! ha!

It was Eddie Robinson, when in New York doing "Big Town," who saw "Arsenic and Old Lace" and persuaded Warners to buy it. When it's done on the screen, he'll play the Boris Karloff part.

Walter Wanger is trying to buy that much-talked-of book, "Out of the Night," by Jan Valtin. I hope Walter gets it. It will make a finer picture than "Foreign Correspondent," and that predated history.

Eddie Arnold will star in the best seller "Odor of Violets," which is a different kind of story. He's blinded in the war, gets a Seeing Eye Dog, and becomes a great detective . . . Poor John McClain! Since Quentin Reynolds became his house guest, the phone has never stopped ringing

The town is screaming over that picture in Screenland of Bette Davis, describing her marriage to Mary Astor.

Ever since Metro lost Deanna Durbin, they've been a-searchin' for another. Well, they found her in little Kathryn Grayson, who has a voice to make the angels weep, and a personality to match.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 26 (INS).—The rumor has persisted for months that Warners are trying to borrow Tyrone Power for "Kings Row," but something tells me Twentieth Century-Fox would rather loan their sound stages than to let Ty leave the home lot. He would be good, there's no doubt in "Kings Row," as the idealistic young doctor, but Twentieth has a few up their sleeve, too. In "A Yank in the R. A. F.," Ty will wear a British uniform. This isn't just one of those movies with maybe, if and but, for it goes into production one week after "Blood and Sand" is finished. Darryl Zanuck, who is a lieutenant colonel in the Reserve, handles the entire production. That reminds me, Darryl is flying to Washington to confer with the general staff of the United States Army about the defense shorts that are being made here.

PARSONS

Capt. James Adams, of the R. A. F., acts as technical adviser in "A Yank in the R. A. F.", which will have the official stamp of Lord Beaverbrook, head of British aircraft production. Shots have already been made in England of the R. A. F. in action.

I told you the other day that Paramount had the inside track on "The Louisiana Purchase," the Buddy De Sylva-Irving Berlin musical. Well, today the deal was closed and Para handed out a nice little $150,000 for the privilege of putting the hit musical on the screen. This combined with the $283,000 paid for "Lady in the Dark," gives Para a new high of prices paid for Broadway hits.

"The Dam," which captured the fancy of Louis B. Mayer because it had the feeling of "Boom Town," was bought today by M-G-M, and the talk now is that the studio will try to get the same setup, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy and Claudette Colbert for its stars. The author, Lester Cohen, adapted the never-to-be-forgotten "Of Human Bondage" and also authored "Sweepings." This story is unpublished, but it's good movie stuff.

Had a long talk with Charlie Chaplin. I wish some of the doubting ones, who have intimated that he has said adieu to Paulette Goddard, could have heard him speak of her. He is planning a new picture and Paulette will have a big part. In fact, I rather suspect he is preparing it with Paulette in view. He is extremely proud of what she has accomplished on the screen and says she has done it completely on her own without his aid.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Elaine Barrie came into the Mocambo with one escort and spent the entire evening talking to Norman Kerry; Constance Moore was the sensation of the place with a wrist watch radio which she dropped into a glass of water and it played a tune. Imagine how that would affect an alcoholic. He would probably be off water for the rest of his life; Connie was at the Lynn Fontanne opening at the Biltmore earlier and she looked like a picture. Alfred Lunt took 11 curtain calls at the theater and made a speech that delighted everyone. All the Pasadena socialites turned out for the opening while the rest of the week the house is sold out to movie celebrities.

Mike Romanoff wires he is hosting a cocktail party for Jack and Charlie of 21 tomorrow at his own cafe; since Lionel Barrymore was flooded out of his Chatsworth ranch his pals have dubbed him the admiral of San Fernando Valley; John Carroll spends many of his evenings at the Florentine Gardens and Barbara Moffett is said to be the attraction;

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 26.

JOE ALSOP, the Washington columnist and cousin of the Roosevelts, has one of the purest Harvard accents ever heard outside the halls of Cambridge. Alsop prepared for Harvard at the swanky Groton School. He also is a member of the ultra-swanky Knickerbocker Club. Both Richard Whitney and Joseph Warren Burden—the broker who was sentenced yesterday for misappropriating $343,000 in securities—are Groton and Harvard men as well as members of the Knickerbocker . . . "I can understand a Groton man committing larceny," said the shocked Alsop. "I can understand a Harvard man committing larceny. I can even understand a Knickerbocker man committing larceny. But I cannot understand a Groton, Harvard and Knickerbocker man committing larceny.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD, who lost more than did any other of Burden's clients, was one of the many eminent men who wrote to the sentencing judge appealing for leniency in behalf of the unfortunate broker. Burden had been supervising Sherwood's investments, without any check-up on the part of the playwright. At one time the broker had written to Sherwood cautioning him to save more money—that he was spending too much . . . "Poor Joe," said Sherwood when he learned of the misappropriations. "I guess he found out he couldn't live on what I was saving."

KURT WEILL tells the story of the old man distributing pamphlets in the streets of Berlin. A storm trooper spied him, confiscated the pamphlets and started to arrest him. He examined the pamphlets, and discovered that there was no writing on them, that all the papers were blank . . . "You admit distributing these?" he asked the old man, who nodded and said: "Yes, I distributed them" . . . "But the papers are blank," said the storm trooper . . . "True," said the old man, sagely, "but the people understand what I mean."

WHEN JOSEF HOFMANN and his wife were invited to dinner at the White House the pianist told Mrs. Hofmann: "I'd feel uncomfortable dining there. I knew the only reason they invited me was to play the piano after dinner. But you'll enjoy dining at the White House—so here's what we'll do. You go there and I'll come after dinner and play the piano for them" . . . Mrs. Hofmann agreed. And so while his wife went off to the White House, Hofmann went to a diner, where he seated himself at the counter. The chairs on each side of him were vacated. Two policemen arrived, occupied those chairs and began to converse. Because Hofmann sat between them they decided to include him in the conversation. "And what do you do, buddy?" they asked . . . "I couldn't tell them," said the pianist later. "I couldn't tell them that I was dining here at a counter instead of at the White House, because I was afraid they'd think I was cracked, and arrest me."

ELSA LANCHESTER, who is rehearsing in a New York play while her husband, Charles Laughton, is completing his Hollywood chores, attended a party last weekend. She was introduced to a young man who wore a boutonniere . . . "Have you been to a wedding?" Miss Lanchester asked him . . . "Oh, no," he replied, suavely. "That comes from the family's garden. From our hothouse on Long Island" . . . He then started for the buffet and asked her: "May I bring you some food?" . . . "Yes, some cake," Miss Lanchester told him. "Some cake. Marie Antoinette's."

GARSON KANIN has enlisted in the Signal Corps and will report for duty when he has completed his current directing job, "Tom, Dick and Harry" . . . John Brgganza, of the Phyllis Brooks set, reports to the Army this week . . . The Daily News, whose copy boys are being drafted, hired two more girls as replacements. The two are Ann Grosvenor, of the social register, and Mrs. Faith Fair, daughter of former Chief Magistrate Corrigan . . . The entire locale of the new "Thin Man" movie has been changed to San Francisco because Mervyn LeRoy, who will direct it, is nostalgic for his old home town . . . The Honeychil' Wilder fight at the Cafe Pierre late Friday night and its resultant publicity upset Tommy Manville. He had been Miss Wilder's escort earlier in the evening. And he had taken her home, because she said she was tired.

BEFORE MARC BLITZSTEIN presented his leftist opera, "No for an Answer," at Mecca Temple he played it for Billy Rose, who had been one of the first to enthuse over Blitzstein's talents. Rose listened while Marc played all the roles, in which the rich exploiters, etc., were denounced. "Not only will I produce it," was the alarmed decision of New-Millionaire Billy Rose, "but I am thinking seriously of calling the police" . . . Mrs. Daniel Dodge, the young Detroit widow who inherited millions, recently was married to Dr. William Lange, a plastic surgeon. They're honeymooning at the Whitman in Miami Beach. News cameramen who came to photograph them last week saw a large bag, and asked the bride: "Are you knitting?" She replied: "Of course not. On a honeymoon?"

Coward sent a note in reply reading: "Come over and have a drink.—Nat Coward (but you may call me Noel)."

Columbia

Blades, personalities and sinister designs all are clashing again at Loew's Columbia Theater, where "The Son of Monte Cristo" resumes his crossing of swords with all and sundry this morning in his drive for the affections of the princess.

This offspring of a testy forebear is played by Louis Hayward and the princess to a throne or two, and more trouble than any single young woman is entitled to, is impersonated by Joan Bennett, still masquerading in a jet-black wig. There is more ominous intrigue in this swashbuckling subject than there is in the Balkans. It all comes off rather handsomely, although not always as handsomely as it should, and in the end finds everything as it should be according to all of the precedents of celluloid extravaganza.

Mr. Hayward and Miss Bennett are by no means the only ones who aid in the hysterics of the junior Cristo's ambitious plans to spit his enemies, save a state and salvage a pretty love affair. George Sanders, Montagu Love, Florence Bates, Lionel Royce, Ian Mac Wolfe, Georges Renavent, Michael Visaroff, Theodor von Eltz, Jack Mulhall and Lawrence Grant are among the others who revive memories of "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Graustark" in this latest expression of the spirit of untrammeled romance.

The usual short subjects to roupd out the bill, of course.

Claudette Veteran On Single Lot

Claudette Colbert begins her twelfth year with Paramount—one of the longest successful star-studio associations in Hollywood history—with "Skylark." As a young Broadway ingenue, she made her film debut in 1929 for Paramount soon rose to stardom and now has been signed to an agreement which extends through 1943.

In "Skylark," a Mark Sandrich-produced-and-directed picture, Miss Colbert costars with Ray Milland, who was her teammate in the recent "Arise My Love."

Little

Having long since established itself as one of the outstanding phenomena of the motion picture year—one of those amazing pictures that come booming out of the nowhere to compound a surpassing popular success—"Night Train" continues its spectacular run at the Little Theater with no apparent abatement of mass interest in its roaring flight to new box-office records.

With Margaret Lockwood and Rex Harrison in the costellar roles, this film also boasts the presence in the cast of Paul von Hernreid, who, unless memory is as treacherous as usual, was one of the major reasons for the success of Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West," on the stage of the National Theater not so long ago.

Originally released under the title of "Gestapo," "Night Train" has proved one of the sensational successes of the year and deserves to be seen by any judicious aspirant to conversance with the best things the contemporary screen has to offer.

There may not have been any sleeper on the night train, but "Night Train" is such a prodigious "sleeper" in itself that that doesn't particularly matter.

Just A Half-Truth

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee took advantage of the first District day in the House to make a persuasive speech on the Sumners resolution. He is unquestionably right in assuming that this proposed amendment to the Constitution authorizing Congress to give Washington a democratic form of government is the most important measure that can be taken up at this time. It is pleasing to note that friends of the local community are losing no time in pressing this issue once more.

In the debate between Representatives Randolph and Zimmerman, however, an unfortunate half-truth was allowed to stand. "They (the founding fathers) did not see fit," said Mr. Zimmerman, "to give the vote to the people of the District and for good reasons they kept the seat of government apart and under the control of the Government." Of course, the founding fathers did not make arrangements for representation of the Capital City in Congress and the Electoral College. Washington did not exist when the Constitution was adopted. No one knew at that time what the political needs of the future capital might be. Certainly they did not know that in 1941 the Capital of this land of liberty would contain 600,000 Americans who are deprived of the right to vote.

Nor should it be assumed that the founding fathers denied all rights of self-government to the future inhabitants of the Capital site on the Potomac. In the early days of the District the people elected their councils as well as their mayors. It was not until 1874 that the right of suffrage was completely withdrawn from Washington, and that withdrawal came solely through an act of Congress. So the city's hapless situation cannot be laid at the door of the founding fathers. It is primarily a problem for Congress, and can best be faced at the moment by passage of the Sumners resolution.

Eden At Ankara

The current visit to Ankara of Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, and Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the imperial general staff, should result in a needed clarification of Turkey's position in relation to the rapidly growing Balkan crisis. With German troops filtering into Bulgaria in increasing numbers, Turkey is confronted with the unpostponable necessity of deciding what her policy is to be. Three courses are open to her. 1. She can scrap the treaty of alliance with Great Britain, even as Rumania repudiated the British guarantee, and interpose no obstacles to German domination of the Balkan Peninsula. 2. She can adopt a wholly defensive attitude, drawing the line against German pressures only in the event of a Nazi assault on the Dardanelles. 3. She can join forces with the British and the Greeks and oppose, by force if necessary, any attempt by the Reich to intervene in the Greek-Italian War.

Thus far Turkey has followed a somewhat zigzag course. Last week's pact of friendship with Bulgaria suggested that Turkey was unready and unwilling to oppose German occupation of that neighboring country. This looked like a victory for Hitler and a blow to the British. Since then, however, the Turkish foreign minister, Mr. Sukru Saracoglu, has clarified the position of the Ankara government, at least to the extent of declaring that Turkey would find it impossible "to remain indifferent to foreign activities which might occur in its security zone." He also said that "Turkey will oppose with force any and all aggression which might be directed against its territorial integrity or its independence." This was clear-cut and certainly made it plain that Ankara has no intentions of scrapping the alliance with Great Britain. The visit of Mr. Eden and Gen. Dill, which could only have been undertaken with the prior consent of the Turkish government, points in the same direction.

The British leaders may now discover whether in the view of the Ankara regime the Turkish "security zone" does or does not include the strip of Greek territory between the Bulgarian frontier and the Aegean. If it does, a powerful center of resistance to a German drive south may be created at Salonika to which part of the British Army of the Nile might conceivably be sent. But that point remains in doubt.

In any event, the British have reason to feel more encouraged by the Turkish attitude than they were after the signature of the Turkish-Bulgarian Treaty. The presence at Ankara of one of the leading British military personalities certainly does suggest the possibility of joint military action by the two nations.

Job And The Man

The report of the President's Committee on Civil Service Improvement signifies a transition in the long struggle for efficiency in government. To date the central objective of the fight has been to divorce the machinery for appointment of public servants from partisan politics. That aim has not yet been fully realized, but the Ramspeck Act has given the President most of the power he will need to extend the merit system throughout the Government service. Efforts are now centered on improvement of the quality of the merit system.

Where the committee plows new ground is in its numerous recommendations for improved technique within the merit system. It suggests that the Civil Service Commission adopt better means of recruiting young attorneys and professional men and women; that it perfect written and oral examinations, and that it establish better contacts with universities and professional associations with the view to drawing competent young men into the Government service. More liberal provision for special training of Government employes is urged. The desirability of promoting capable men and women in the service is emphasized. Existing barriers to the transfer of professional, scientific and administrative personnel would be reduced to a minimum. The rules regarding apportionment of civil service jobs among residents of the various States would be liberally interpreted in the interests of efficiency. The committee recommends an "inventory" of administrative skill in the various departments so that positions may be more readily filled within the service.

These thoughtful recommendations designed to create a genuine career service should not be obscured by the controversy over the selection of Federal lawyers. Four members of the committee believe that the selection of attorneys continues a unique problem and should be recognized as such. Emphasizing the need for flexibility in choosing the right lawyers for specific assignments, they recommend an "unranked register" which would give all applicants passing the examination an equal chance for the appointment. Certainly there is danger in trying to select attorneys by written examinations alone, but certification of, say, 500 attorneys for a few available jobs would also leave much to be desired.

The other four members of the committee insist that flexibility can be achieved within the present framework of the merit system through procedures already established for other professional groups. So they favor "a register on which names appear in order of merit as tested by examinations." An "unranked register," they contend, would "open the door to every form of pressure and discrimination. . . ." Possibly both positions are extreme. If examinations are so unreliable that an agency is left to choose between several hundred candidates, it seems questionable whether they serve any useful purpose at all. Doubtless the methods of examination could be improved. When that has been done, it would seem reasonable to place the eligibles on the list according to their rating, and give the employing agency a wider margin of choice from the graded list.

The Penitential Mode

Considering that about half the world is on pretty short commons already, and that perhaps a third of it is not too far from starvation, the advent of the traditional Lenten fast may seem this year another curious irony of the times. However, it is worth remembering that the custom of the Lenten fast dates from a time when famines were not at all uncommon in Christendom. And with the profound psychological wisdom it has always shown in such matters, the Church established the penitential season in the interregnum between winter and springtime—the time of "lengthening days" whence its name is derived. This is the period when, even in good years, the winter stocks of food were pretty sure to be running low. Thus was necessity made to serve the purpose of virtue.

The year-round abundance to which the era of rapid communications has accustomed us, at least in peacetime, has been paralleled by a decline of Lenten observance in most parts of the Christian world. For a great many modern Christians, Lent, though it may mean a quickening of religious activity, entails little or no modification of habits at the table. Even for Catholics and Anglicans, the Lenten restrictions are far less severe than formerly, and concern the character more than the quantity of food. On most days of the week flesh meat is permitted at least once. The proportion of those who as a form of penance abjure amusements and other little luxuries throughout Lent is probably much smaller than a generation ago.

But there has been a parallel decline of the festive customs formerly associated with the approach of Lent. It does not appear, for instance, that any attempt was made this year to hold the Shrovetide carnival at Nice. The idea of a Fat Tuesday (Mardi Gras) must have seemed something of a mockery to the French. But then the carnival at Nice, like the one at New Orleans, long ago ceased to have the nature of a great popular festival and had become a carefully promoted spectacle for the attraction of tourists. However, the British, more tenacious of their customs than any other race, doubtless ate their Shrove Tuesday pancakes as usual, war or no war.

It all seems to prove that, aside from its supposed spiritual values, there is nothing like a little fasting to make one appreciate the ritualistic qualities of food and drink and nothing like the prospect of abstention to sharpen the desire to make merry.

Strikes Vs. Defense

Officials of the OPM are showing concern over the strike which began last night in the Lackawanna plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co. When they testified before the House Judiciary Committee last week, both William S. Knudsen, director, and Sidney J. Hillman, associate director, were complacent over the possibility that strikes may jeopardize the defense program. Even then employes of the Lackawanna mill were threatening to walk out. The present scurrying of officials to prevent the stoppage of work that would delay the filling of enormous defense orders seems to leave their testimony of last week a little shaky.

Obviously the Government cannot tolerate a breakdown in the defense program, whether such a threat stems from labor disputes or other causes. Congress gave the President sweeping powers to take over the plants of employers refusing to manufacture arms and munitions at reasonable prices or to give preference to Government orders. Whether this power could be used to take over a plant closed by a labor dispute is a moot question. But in any event the Government will doubtless be slow to take over enormous industrial establishments, which it might not be able to operate efficiently.

Some more effective means of ironing out labor disputes and keeping the Nation's defense plants in steady operation is patently needed. It is reported that the OPM plans to set up a national mediation board for defense industries. There is a broad question, however, as to whether any such board will have all the authority needed to substitute negotiations for walkouts in the absence of Congressional legislation. Congress ought to act unless it finds far more conclusive evidence than is now available that critical stoppages can be averted under present law.

In the case of the Bethlehem Steel company, officials seem to carry a large share of the responsibility for the walkout. If they refuse even to discuss the dispute, as union officials charge, their conduct is inexcusable. The union has effectively put the company on the spot by offering to submit the dispute to mediators for decision. It is by no means impossible that an employer who refuses to negotiate such differences may be held to have violated the requirements of the so-called draft-industry law.

On the other hand, workers should not take advantage of the present situation to demand exorbitant wage increases. C. I. O. President Murray takes the attitude that "if strikes menace the national defense program, it will be due to industry's refusal to allow the worker to raise his living standards." This is no time for the employment of force for that purpose. If the defense effort is to succeed, sacrifices from all groups will be necessary. The Government has a very positive obligation to prevent a stiff-necked attitude on the part of employers and unreasonable demands of employes from jeopardizing our national security.

Undiplomatic

Representative Rich of Pennsylvania was stretching matters a bit when he declared that the conduct of Minister George H. Earle has jeopardized the peace of the United States. The question of whether or not this country is to become involved in the war is likely to be decided by factors quite independent of anything that happens in the night clubs of Sofia. Mr. Rich would have done better merely to have pointed out that our Minister to Bulgaria has seriously compromised the dignity of his country.

While the demand for the recall of Mr. Earle at this late hour seems rather pointless, the question of how he came to be chosen in the first place is quite pertinent. Mr. Earle has been in public life long enough for his temperament to be well known to the White House. Neither that temperament nor other qualifications recommended him for an important diplomatic post in a time of crisis. Since Mr. Earle is in Sofia and is likely to remain there for the present, it is certainly not too much to expect him to indulge his fondness for night-club entertainment with at least a minimum of circumspection.

FOR U. J.

I built her a tower when I was young—
Sometime she will die—
I built it with my hands, I hung
Stones in the sky.

Old but still strong I climb the stone—
Sometime she will die—
Climb the steep rough steps alone,
And weep in the sky.

Streets Of Washington

I have read with great interest and amusement the brief communication in The Post of February 25 from Rosalie Supplee regarding recent severe wear and tear on silk hose. The lady ascribes the difficulty to Washington's "dirty streets," and asks "Why can't we have clean streets?"

To one who has seen some cities with dirty streets, this lady's complaint is really funny. I would very seriously suggest and urge Miss (or Mrs.) Supplee to take just one comparatively short trip and compare Washington's streets, or the cleanliness of them, to those in Baltimore, Wilmington, Jersey City, any portion of New York, Hartford, Boston, Portland (Me.), Albany, Schenectady, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Cleveland. Of course, the latter four are particularly recommended. If she is still interested in learning how clean Washington streets are, let her compare them with those in cities of the South and West: Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso. Most streets in Arizona cities are clean, except just after a duststorm. But go over and take a look around San Diego and the great group of cities around Los Angeles. Santa Barbara is fairly clean. San Francisco is filthy, as is Portland, Oreg. Olympia, Tacoma, and Seattle are not bad. Galveston, Cleveland and Buffalo probably are a close tie for the very worst.

I must say again, after having seen—and observed—the streets of all the prominent cities of the United States, with the exception of Chicago, St. Louis and Denver, the streets of Washington are cleaner than any others I have seen.

ALBERT D. RUST.
Mount Rainier, Md., Feb. 25.

I dread windy days in Washington, with their clouds of germ-laden dust that are caught up and swirled about by every gust of wind.

Of course the District does have a sprinkler wagon that goes around and dampens down the dust temporarily. It shoots its stream of water clear across the sidewalk, choking pedestrians with the duststorm it drives before it and drenching them with water if they aren't lucky enough to duck into a side street or an alley or scramble up a stairway. The small city in which I lived all my life before I came to Washington isn't any too modern, but there the sprinkler wagon went out with the horse and buggy and the streets were thoroughly flushed at frequent intervals with water from the fire hose—a thing I have never seen done in Washington.

Why not give Washington's streets a real spring cleaning and get rid of the winter's accumulation of filth before March winds finish the germ-scattering job February winds have already started?

Asia For Asiatics

The editorial appearing in The Post of February 25, "Eyes On Singapore," is extremely interesting, especially to one who is absolutely impartial regarding the acquisition of Japanese territory in the Far East. We must face facts. The average American is blinded by color and racial prejudice. Any move by a nonwhite power to increase its territory in the East is attended with a distorted reaction on the part of a great majority of Americans. Times change. No one group of people have ever ruled the entire earth for centuries upon centuries. So why not concede the ruling of Asiatic peoples by Asiatics. PRO-AMERICAN.

Diplomacy Abroad

I have read in the newspapers of the incident precipitated by United States Minister George H. Earle in a restaurant in Sofia, Bulgaria, and am astonished that a man of his experience should have been so indiscreet. Irrespective of the personal feelings which any of us may have on the war in Europe, it is certainly out of place for any diplomat, and for any private citizen, to go to extremes in expressing an opinion or in committing an act in a war zone against any nation.

To have asked the orchestra to play "Tipperary" in a country that was about to be invaded by the Germans, in a restaurant in which many German officials were present, was certainly not discreet for an American diplomat who at one time had been the Governor of a great State like Pennsylvania.

I believe it would have been more appropriate for Minister Earle to have asked the orchestra to play "The Star-Spangled Banner" or "Dixie," or "Yankee Doodle" without arousing any criticism from anyone. But for him to have asked for an obviously British war song, in a country like Bulgaria, was about as bad as asking a band to play "Marching Through Georgia" in a Southern city like Atlanta.

I hope that the State Department will admonish Minister Earle and other diplomats not to create incidents of that sort, anywhere in Europe or elsewhere, whether in a belligerent country or not. Some diplomats do not realize that the policy of the State Department is made in Washington and not by roving diplomats who are still new to the profession.

Voice From North Dakota

Mr. Davis, editor of the Grand Forks (N. Dak.) Herald, February 16, writes:

"I grow weary of the constantly reiterated statement that the people of the Middle West, the Great Plains States, are relatively indifferent to war conditions in Europe, to the possible effect of those conditions on the United States, and to the problem of national defense."

The people of the Middle West are not "relatively indifferent" (as Mr. Davis explains so well later on) to war conditions in Europe; are not relatively indifferent "to the possible effect of those conditions on the United States," and are not "relatively indifferent to the problem of national defense." The people of the Middle West entertain differences of method on the subject, but a wholehearted support of the major plan is expressed everywhere.

This misconception as to where the voters of the Middle West stand is presumably (at least in North Dakota) due chiefly to the attitude of Senator Nye.

Every individual has a right to his own opinion. A public servant, however, is supposed to lend expression to the opinion of his constituents, even if this goes against his own views. Here Senator Nye has failed. And the people of North Dakota strongly condemn his attitude on this world-important question. O. H. RYSTAD.

Truth And Propaganda

A recent letter in these columns warning us against British propaganda makes me wonder as to the exact difference between truth and propaganda. For example, the following facts incline one to sympathize with England in her one-sided struggle:

The fact that Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," not only leads the German people to believe that Germany is destined to rule the world, but that the Germans are the only race fit to rule the world.

The fact that Hitler has repeatedly broken his word and violated his written pledges by brutally attacking such nations as Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, etc., and then robbed these conquered nations of food and any other materials they needed.

The fact that in many authenticated instances German aviators bombed and machine-gunned refugees along the roads of northern France and Belgium; also survivors of sinking ships who were helpless targets in lifeboats.

The fact that in promiscuously bombing London the Germans have murdered thousands of civilians, well knowing they had no military objectives in view.

If these and many other truths are British propaganda, then the meaning of the word "propaganda" has certainly been changed. C. R. G.

H. R. 1776 "A Betrayal"

Supporters of the lend-lease bill, as a reason for granting dictatorial powers to the President, assert that to combat successfully totalitarian countries it will be necessary for America to adopt the same efficient, direct methods as those used by the dictators. This apparently plausible argument is exploded by the fact that adopting totalitarian methods would lose us our liberty and the other rights we are willing to fight for—without a fight and without hope of recovering them soon. There is no industrial system in the world more efficient than that of the United States, and the only point in which it is exceeded is in cheapness of production which is achieved in Germany and Russia by virtual forced labor—approximating slavery. It is this regimentation of human beings which we so bitterly oppose.

Common sense and patriotism dictate that Congress should enact no legislation which surrenders the constitutional powers and priceless rights belonging to the citizens of the United States. Passage of the lend-lease bill would be a betrayal of America.

First-Hand Information

Like millions of other American voters I am extremely anxious that Senator Wheeler and the other isolationist Senators should go to England and observe conditions there for themselves. If they start right away, they can arrive just in time for the spring offensive and can then see if they do not want American planes above them helping the Spitfires keep off the bombers.

I do not think it fair for Mr. Willkie to be the only Republican with first-hand information on democracy protecting itself from aggression, and until they do know from personal experience just what it is like, I do not think they have a right to try to slow up America's help to the other democracies.

The Post Impressionist

The Maryland Gazette

Crumbling with age are the files of the original copies of the Maryland Gazette, published as early as 1727. Today the Maryland Gazette is serving 45,000 people in southern Maryland, as in former years it served the leading citizens of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and other colonies. More than two centuries of publication has made it a valuable chronicle of American history and journalism.

Publishing foreign news six months after the events occurred was sometimes necessitated by the slow means of communication in that day, but news was not highly perishable before the time of cables, radios and telephones.

Strange stories appeared in the Maryland Gazette. A cat was credited with 140 years of existence. "Several persons now living remember her above 60 years," the dispatch stated, "and the owner . . . can remember her above 50 years."

The PWA does not seem to be as exacting as the slave master of that day. A Negro took a broad-ax, according to a report, and chopped off one of his hands rather than submit to the drudgery of hard work. Another slave quarreled with his master and smote him, inflicting a minor injury. The Negro was taken before the city magistrate and his ears were cropped, according to the law.

Forecast of the New Deal appeared in a letter from the leading merchants of London, April 15, 1729. Maryland planters were advised:

First, plant less tobacco every year;

Second, destroy a part of the crop, especially the worst;

Third, let the land idle every fourth year.

While rum, real estate, and runaway slaves were the chief objects advertised in the Maryland Gazette, some nostrums were given ample space. A flaming page and a quarter described certain Chinese stones and powders as having marvelous healing powers. "Rheumatism, gout, bite of venomous snakes, cancers, swellings, pleurisy, toothache, headache, and numerous other diseases" were said to be cured by the external application of the remedies. A long list of testimonies of people who claimed to have been cured were cited. (September 13, 1745.)

Peter Robinson advertised his school at Upper Marlborough where various subjects were taught. Naming the three R's, he continued, "geometry, cosmography, astronomy, merchants' accounts or the art of booking-keeping after the Italian manner, algebra, the use of seacharts, maps, quadrants, forestaffs, nocturnal protractor, scales, Coggershalls . . ."

A notice of a fugitive slave read, "Mr. James Woolford . . . has in his custody, 7 or 8 months, two Negroes, one of them tall, and the other middle statured; neither of them can speak English."

Protesting against petty, irritating nuisance taxes on small articles, known as the Stamp Act, and the forbidding of trial by jury to all offenders, a group of irate citizens gathered at the dock in Annapolis and prevented the landing of Zachariah Hood, who was sent from London to serve as stamp collector in August, 1765.

A skull and crossbones on the front page of the Maryland Gazette instead of a stamp was the editor's (Jonas Green) reply to the Stamp Act. Emblazoned at the top of the page one read, "The Maryland Gazette Expiring in Uncertain Hopes of a Resurrection," for he described the times as "Dreadful, dismal, doleful, dolorous and dollar-less." The Maryland Gazette was soon revived.

A mock funeral was enacted in demonstration of the people's anger at the proclamation of Gov. Robert Eden on the collection of fees and taxes. The procession moved in solemn array to the tune of muffled drums and fifes. The coffin bore the epitaph:

THE PROCLAMATION
The Child of Folly and Oppression
Born the 26th of November, 1770
Departed This Life
14th of May, 1773,
and Buried on the Same Day
The Freemen of Annapolis.

Some years later (about 1836) a curious incident about "Jeffrey Jig," a man who lived at the foot of Duke of Gloucester Street, was related. Jeffrey periodically fell into a comatose state and was several times prepared for interment, but he always awoke in time to prevent the obsequies. On one occasion his resuscitation was deferred until he was placed in the grave. As the clods began to fall on the coffin a noise was heard, and the bystanders exclaimed that he was still alive. Tradition has it that Joseph Simmons, one of the oldest inhabitants of the city, continued to fill up the grave, saying, "He's got to die sometime, and if he is not dead, he ought to be."

Sixteen social clubs were in existence in Colonial Annapolis. Jonas Green, the editor of the Maryland Gazette, who was described as "a printer, punster, purveyor, poet and punch-maker," was the leading light in the conviviality of the celebrated Tuesday Club. A certain aroma of hot Jamaica rum, Lisbon lemons, and a soft tobacco haze hung over these assemblies of festivity and fellowship.

Fox hunting, horse racing every fall and spring, theaters in winter, assemblies every fortnight, dinners four times a week, card parties, private balls on every festival, wit, learning, and stately manners softened by the love of good fellowship, characterized Annapolis in 1775.

The first theater was built in Annapolis in 1752 and the Maryland Gazette printed the handbills for the company of players, and presented weekly criticisms. The "fans" too voiced their enthusiasm in letters to the editor.

Today And Tomorrow

Tried And Found Wanting

IN WEIGHING the arguments of what is now the opposition in Congress, it is important to remember that it has been the isolationists who controlled American foreign policy from the end of the first World War until the crisis of the Second World War. For the 20 years from the end of 1919 to the summer of 1940 the isolationists have shaped American policy on all essential matters—on the organization of peace, on neutrality, on armament and disarmament, on monetary, financial, and commercial relations with the rest of the world. Their views have prevailed throughout this period of our history, the isolationists' views and not the views of Wilson and Hughes and Stimson and Roosevelt and Hull and Wendell Willkie.

LIPPMANN

Never did a philosophy have a more thorough trial. For 20 years the isolationists have had the backing of a large majority of the people. They have been all-powerful in Congress and they have determined the actions, always negatively by their veto and on crucial issues positively as well, of five Administrations.

TODAY the isolationists are a rapidly dwindling minority who are making their last stand on the claim that when they are voted down the country will be committed to war. That is what they have said about everything for 20 years. Every measure they opposed was, they insisted, a measure leading to war, and every measure they favored was, they insisted, a measure to prevent war. They have been listened to. They have been followed. And after 20 years of their policy we are where we are: Committed to the greatest military program in our history, faced for the first time in a century by a hostile alliance, and in a state which, though it is not war, is certainly not peace.

The historical reckoning is now at hand, and the evidence is now in on which the people are judging whether the isolationists who have ruled this country's foreign policy for 20 years have understood the vital interests of America, its security and its peace. For the situation in which we find ourselves is the end of a 20-year policy in which the isolationists have invariably had the last word.

AFTER a victorious war it was the isolationists who forced the United States to make a separate peace and to withdraw from all further association with the other democracies to keep the world safe for democracy. It was the isolationists who insisted on that sudden breaking of economic collaboration and that helter-skelter demobilization here and among the Allies which caused the first great post-war depression. This they followed up by insisting on the first of those destructive tariff bills which, with ever increasing severity over the years, imposed economic isolation and a cut-throat competition upon the nations of the world.

It was the isolationists who set their faces against a workable solution of the debt problem and imposed upon us and upon the Allies the devastating policy of collecting uncollectible reparations and debts. It was the isolationists who wrote the laws which forbade us to lend money to our old friends and allies but left the way open to the wild lending of the Twenties. It was the isolationists who capped this obstruction to economic reconstruction and recovery by the Hawley-Smoot tariff in Hoover's Administration and by the wrecking of the World Economic Conference in the first Roosevelt Administration.

REFUSING to let this country work with other countries to preserve the peace that our Army and Navy had helped to win, or to restore the world after the losses and dislocation of war, the isolationists went further and insisted not only on dividing the nations one from another but on disarming them. In 1918 the victory was won by the combined action of the sea power of Britain, America, Japan, and France. With the best of intentions but with a deadly misunderstanding, we all adopted the isolationist view of disarmament and separateness. We stopped the growth of our own Navy. We induced Britain to let her own navy become dangerously weak. And we took the fatal step of breaking up the association with Japan, imposing upon Japan a policy of isolation which was the beginning of Japan's increasingly restless imperialism.

Having disarmed ourselves, and divided the old Allies from each other, we adopted the pious resolutions of the Kellogg Pact, and refused even to participate in the organization of a World Court. Then, having obstructed the reconstruction of the world, and having seen the ensuing anarchy produce the revolutionary imperialist dictatorships of Russia, Italy, and Germany, we tried to protect the failure of isolation by the policy of insulation—by the Neutrality Acts which were to keep us safe by renouncing our rights.

WHAT WAS THE plea which always clinched the argument in this whole long 20-year policy of refusal, division, separatism, weakness, and escape? It was that if the isolationists were not followed, there would be war and American boys would again be killed on the battlefields of France. That was why we scuttled our own victory. That was why we let the world, including ourselves, go to the economic disaster which produced revolution abroad and here, the long terrible depression of the Thirties. That was why we disarmed. That was why we quarreled with our old allies over debts and other trifles, and spread over the world the infinitely dangerous illusion that this great democracy was paralyzed, unable and unwilling to do anything to preserve law and order and peace and security in the world.

Surely, Wendell Willkie is right when he says that we have come to the end of isolationist thinking in this country. For isolationist thinking, the thinking which has disorganized the democratic world and disarmed it, is responsible for the failure of the peace and for the fact, therefore, that we must now for the second time in the lives of many of us face such dangers and carry such burdens. For we are compelled to deal today with the consequences of the isolationist policy that we adopted and followed for 20 years.

Missouri Chief Takes Oath 6 Weeks Late

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 26 (AP).—Forrest C. Donnell took the Governor's oath six weeks late today, and immediately outlined a broad administration program to the legislature which tried in vain to keep him out of office.

But even as the 19-gun gubernatorial salute boomed from field pieces on the Capitol grounds, Lawrence McDaniel, of St. Louis, was preparing a formal contest of the November election in which he trailed Donnell by 3,613 votes.

A Trouble-Shooter?

FORMATION of a central coordinating office, to tie together all the complex manifestations of the defense effort is being seriously considered by the President. If the plan goes through, moreover, there is a pretty fair chance that Harry L. Hopkins will be named to the position of coordinator.

This possibility is probably what has given rise to the recurrent reports that a "super-defense agency" would soon be created. Actually, nothing so grandiose is intended. Besides the service departments and the Office of Production Management, uncounted other agencies, ranging from the Office of the Administrator of Export Control and the Export-Import Bank to the RFC and the Treasury, have important defense duties. At present there is no shadow of coordination, except such as can be supplied by the President in his spare time. Conflicts are interminable. Situations are continually arising in which nothing but the decisive word of a single reasonably sensible person is needed to prevent endless delay. Yet the delays continue.

Trouble-shooting, rather than general directive activity, will be the task of the central coordinating office if it is established. Of course central coordinating offices commonly only complicate matters, since they rarely have as much authority as the agencies whose differences they are supposed to mediate. If Hopkins is well enough to be the coordinator, however, this case ought, perhaps to be different. Hopkins is the President's closest friend, and the only man who can speak for the White House with anything like real authority. Except on major issues, few officials will care to pursue their feuds, if the price is the disfavor of the President's crony and constant companion.

HOPKINS' very special position causes the significance of everything he does to be vastly exaggerated. His visit to England, for example, has been widely portrayed as a mission from the left-wingers of the New Deal to the left-wingers of the British Labor party. Actually, there were only two reasons for it. In the first World War enmity had arisen between the President and Winston Churchill and it was crucially necessary that all lingering ill-feeling be smoothed away, and that a close personal liaison be established between the two men. Hopkins was chosen to undertake the job, partly because he was well suited to it by his peculiar talents, and partly because he very much wanted something to do.

No doubt the excitement will be intense if Hopkins is named coordinator, or given some other title carrying with it coordinative powers. Yet, although it is a good bet his appointment will be portrayed as another defeat for the businessmen employed on national defense, the fact is that a good many of the businessmen think the idea a pretty sensible one.

For some time, indeed, leading figures in the Office of Production Management have been discussing the possibility of persuading Hopkins to act as a link between them and the White House. Most of them know him well, and see him regularly. They find they have no difficulty in talking to him. And they want someone to whom they can take problems not important enough to bother the President with, yet requiring some assurance of the President's approval to be efficiently settled.

This desire to make Hopkins a link between the OPM and the White House was of course the reason for his appointment to the OPM's production planning board. Despite the prominence given reports of its formation, the board itself is almost certain to become one of those gassy, formless bodies with grandiose titles but few duties which are so common in our Government. In truth, the most meaningful thing about the board is probably the inclusion of Hopkins on the initiative of the businessmen in the OPM.

THE MAIN OBSTACLE to Hopkins' appointment as defense trouble shooter or coordinator is his health, which is still far from good. If he does not feel equal to the task, there are plenty of other candidates. One is William C. Bullitt, who has long been mentioned in White House circles as a possible "speeder-upper" of defense. Another is Bernard M. Baruch, whose rich experience from the days of the first World War is already informally available to the men in charge of the defense effort.

Possibly none of these three will be the final choice. Possibly no coordinator will be named at all. The plans for shaking up the defense effort are multiplying daily on the President's desk, and a new one that will charm him may be handed in any morning. One thing must be plain, however, to all persons reasonably informed about the defense effort's progress. While no "super-defense agency" is required, some system of effective coordination is desperately needed, and until it is supplied, the defense effort will progress more by good luck than good management.

Commander In Chief

By Merlo J. Pusey

Can The Navy Convoy British Ships?

A CLEARER understanding of the President's enormous power as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy is emerging from the current discussion. It is not surprising that the scope of this power should have been enveloped in confusion. The President seldom has occasion to employ the full authority granted him as Commander in Chief; so the extent of that power has not been positively defined by usage. Moreover, there is a large twilight zone between the war powers granted to Congress and the command of the Army and Navy assigned to the President.

PUSEY

For that reason it may be impossible at this time to determine precisely where the area of Congressional authority ends and the responsibility of the President begins. Yet there are many guide lines which will enable the citizen seeking information to avoid some of the extreme views presented on the floor of the Senate and elsewhere. And certainly the gravity of the present situation should induce us to examine the facts so far as they extend. It is no time for wishful thinking.

THE PRESIDENT'S powers as Commander in Chief are very great indeed. Nor should anyone suppose that these powers are part of the responsibility placed upon the President by New Deal legislation. It is the Constitution itself which made the President Commander in Chief and which laid upon him the obligation to see that "the laws be faithfully executed." Congress cannot modify that charge. It has power "to raise and support armies" and "to provide and maintain a navy." It may deny appropriations requested by the President for support of the Army or Navy or tell him how the money shall be spent. But, as the late Senator Borah used to say, if there is an Army or Navy in existence and subject to command, the President "may send it where he will in the discharge of his duty to protect the life and property of American citizens."

It seems to be generally agreed that the President may send troops to a foreign country for the protection of American citizens. In doing so, he may create a situation that will make war almost inevitable. Mr. Borah was careful to point out, however, that this power is not unlimited. The President is in the right only so long as he acts defensively for the protection of American lives and property. And should such action result in a state of war, defined by the Supreme Court as a conflict between opposing forces, the question of waging that war is certainly one for Congress to decide.

THE POINT WHICH many commentators have missed is that the President's power to employ military and naval force abroad is connected with his obligation to protect American lives and property. But Congress also has substantial powers over the rights of American citizens on the seas and in other countries. That was clearly illustrated by enactment of the Neutrality Law forbidding American merchant ships to enter war zones and restricting travel by Americans on the ships of belligerent countries. In the Slaughter House cases the Supreme Court decided that citizens have a right to be protected abroad, and the President has the right to use the Army and Navy for that purpose. Still, that does not preclude Congress from imposing restrictions upon such citizens to make the necessity for use of armed forces less likely.

CERTAINLY Congress has no power, as Charles Warren has pointed out, to prevent the President from exercising his constitutional functions as Commander in Chief. But it is equally certain that Congress may pass some types of legislation having the effect of restraining use of the Army or Navy. The President remains in command. But even a commander must respect legislation constitutionally enacted. It must not be forgotten that the Constitution gives to Congress power "to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces." That authority can be exercised only in so far as it does not encroach upon the President's constitutional duties. Nevertheless, it would appear to give Congress a large measure of control over military and naval policy in cases where the protection of American lives and property is not directly involved.

Prof. Edward S. Corwin has taken direct issue with Mr. Warren's view that Congress has no power to restrict the movements of men o' war. He cites the Supreme Court as authority for the statement that Congress has the power to make partial war as well as total war. "And certainly no one can deny," he says, "that for us to furnish Britain merchantmen with naval convoys would be an act of hostility against Great Britain's enemies."

The possibility of convoying American ships loaded with munitions and supplies for Britain seems to have been ruled out for the present by a Senate amendment to the lease-lend bill. "Nothing in this act," that provision reads, "shall be construed to authorize or to permit the authorization of the entry of any American vessels into a combat area in violation of Section 3 of the Neutrality Act of 1939." In other words, American merchantmen will still be excluded from war zones by this provision. No one can reasonably contend that the President would be free to convoy commercial ships under the American flag into zones where they are forbidden by law to go.

THE QUESTION as to whether the Navy may be used to protect foreign merchantmen in the absence of restraining legislation is still in controversy. It is argued on one hand that the President may employ the Navy for any purpose which he believes will serve our national interests. But that view would reduce the war-making powers of Congress to a mere shadow and seems to be inconsistent with the decision of the Supreme Court in the Bas v. Tingy case. That opinion, as Dr. Corwin has noted, was handed down in 1800 while the original theory of the Constitution was still strongly felt.

The limits of this twilight zone of power may never be definitely fixed. For if the President concludes that the American Navy should help to break the submarine and airplane blockade of Great Britain, he will probably ask Congress to modify the Neutrality Act and declare war.

Air Travel On Credit

Seventeen airlines have announced an installment plan for air travel. No down payment is required. You get a ticket to go up if your credit rating proves you are the sort of person who will come down and make good.

The idea should bring many more customers. Lots of people would fly if they knew it wouldn't cost them a cent until after they had landed.

This is the first time in flying history that it has been possible to risk your neck on a credit basis.

It is almost like hoping, collection-on-delivery.

And it is going to seem strange but highly satisfying to get out of a clipper and just say, "Put it on my bill."

This credit idea has already been introduced by some railroads. You can take a transcontinental choo-choo ride now on the so-much-down-and-so-much-a-month basis, and the idea is proving popular. Americans like to travel on the cuff, and there is something highly satisfying in being able to owe a railroad money.

When you have to plank down your money before you even get by the iron gates at a railroad terminal it takes something out of the trip. No matter how good the scenery is you discount it on the ground that it ought to be better for that much money.

If you are jerked out of an upper berth by a green engineer or bad brakes, it is all the more exasperating when you know the discomforts have been paid for in advance.

But if you owe the railroad for the trip, it's not as annoying.

The same will be true of airplane travel. Your hair may stand on end at the thought of a cross-country flight, but it becomes much easier to handle with a brush and comb when you know the company can't take a dime of your dough in advance.

And if you are dropping down by parachute, think of the satisfaction of knowing that it's all being done on the deferred payment plan!

There will be the kick, too, of getting a bill from the airplane company with a "please remit" notation and dashing off a little note:

"Gentlemen:

"Your bill for flight to Chicago received and in reply I beg to state that I did not enjoy the trip. It was very bumpy, the plane was 2 hours late and it was so cloudy that I did not see half the scenery I was entitled to. I was not satisfied and hope there can be an adjustment.

"P. S.—The hostess wasn't good looking, either. I should say she wasn't within $10 of the good looks of the hostess on my previous trip, so you can take something off my bill for this, too."

We take no stock in Fiorello LaGuardia's statement that he will not run for Mayor of New York again. His auto siren is in too good shape and his fire helmet isn't nearly worn out.

Add similes: He looked as battered as if he had been protected by the Nazis.

Fair Enough

New Order

CIVILIANS who have been visiting the cantonments of the new Army and have seen soldiers and flat-hat sailors on the streets of cities and towns may have reasonable curiosity as to the customs of the two services which produce some of the effects that are observed in the dress and bearing of the individual.

It is a rule of the Navy that sailors on liberty shall at all times maintain, to the best of their individual ability, the appearance of civilian tourists in service uniform rather than of alert, disciplined members of a proud and efficient service. To this end it is required that the sailor ashore wear his pea jacket unbuttoned and flapping in the wind or fastened with one button at most.

Efforts are made also to create a rumpled or slept-in effect in the clothing, and, although this has been done by hand to date and good results have been had, a machine has recently been invented which will rumple a suit of blues and the jacket in a few minutes. Owing to the unfortunate jam, or bottleneck, in the tool industry, production of these machines has been delayed, but it is hoped to have them in quantity soon, and meanwhile the handwork is very satisfactory.

THE BEARING recommended for members of liberty parties is a round, or humped-shoulder, droop, which is heightened by the placing of the hands in the pockets and there is maintained on every well-conducted ship and station a box of powder, or dust, of a regulation brand from which, by strict requirement, every sailor, before going ashore, is required to obliterate from his shoes any suggestion that they ever have been shined.

There are several brands of patent grease spots for the uniforms, but experiments still are in progress with these, and there is no regulation issue as yet, although the most effective results have been obtained from one brand which creates a remarkably realistic appearance of chop suey spilled down in the front. In fact, this compound actually does consist of attar of chop suey, blended with foo young dan and yat gar mein. These stains remain fast for a long time, so the product is economical of both effort and money, and this concentrate, therefore, probably will be adopted.

In both services a problem has arisen in creating the hillbilly or haystack effect in the hair, and it is only right that the difficulties should be known so that the results may be appreciated. The trouble is that some old, traditional officers of both the Army and the Navy still insist that a short haircut around the temples and down the neck is the true military mode and are supported in this by the older noncoms and service barbers. Consequently it has been found necessary to adopt, as regulation equipment, a wool wig copied from that of Mr. Harpo Marx, the dumb one in the movie team, which is worn by those whose natural hair is not sufficiently shaggy to pass inspection. They are very strict about this, but the new tradition is growing fast and the wigs soon will be discarded as unnecessary.

Soldiers on pass, too, are required to wear their coats unbuttoned, keep their hands in their pockets at all times and walk with a slouch, and some of the old regulars have been picked up by the M. P.'s for failure to observe one or more of these new requirements. The regulars and certain veteran members of the National Guard have been stubborn, too, or, at any rate, slow to learn the new position of attention, in which the abdomen is thrust prominently to the fore, the head is rolled slowly from side to side, while the left little finger briskly jiggles in the left ear, in three counts. Some of the more up-to-date units also chew gum at attention.

THE MODERNIZED "military manner" of sentries on post is a radical departure from old custom and would drive Gen. Pershing crazy—a fact which certainly dates the old man with his fogey superstitions about enemies slipping up on inattentive sentries in the guise of salesmen or strangers wanting to know the correct time and conking them over the head. And he would go nuts over the new salute, too, in which the head is bowed down to meet the rising hand half-way, but there, again, you have the contrast between the old and the new.

The theory behind all this seems thoroughly sound. The theory is that because the German soldiers and sailors are snappy, close barbered, neat and always on their toes and the United States is anti-Nazi in all things, the greatest possible contrast should be maintained in these particulars, too.

Points At Issue

By Mark Sullivan

Much Needless Debate On Lend-Lease

AT THE PRESENT stage, much of the debate on the lend-lease bill, on both sides, is beside the point. On both sides, much of the debate is about water already over the dam. Some of the debate is unclarifying, because both sides, for their different reasons, hesitate to admit present facts and future implications.

SULLIVAN

Some of the opponents of the bill are still arguing about whether we should help Britain. But that question was, decided weeks ago, and in the affirmative. In the House, on February 8, the 260 members who voted for the lease-lend bill, clearly voted for help to Britain. And practically all the 165 members who voted against the bill in its present form, took almost a formal position that while they opposed the present bill, they would favor help to Britain if the help were put in a different form. The form that had practically official status as the position of the opposition was help to Britain in the shape of credit or cash, a loan or gift. Again and again individuals and spokesmen of groups said their objection to the present bill lay in the enormous power, discretion and responsibility which the present bill confers on the President. Again and again they said they would support a measure which gave help to Britain in the simple form of cash or credit.

NEVERTHELESS, with help to Britain an accepted position on both sides, some of the Senate debate continues to dwell on whether Britain is actually close to the end of her capacity to pay cash, whether she should be required to sell American securities and property owned by her citizens, whether she should be required to give security for the help we give her, whether she should be required to transfer to the United States some possessions in the West Indies. Granted that this country has decided to give help to Britain, all this about financial details has a status little above quibbling.

Similarly, some of the Senate debate still dwells on whether the United States needs to take account of a possible Nazi victory. Whether Hitler, if he conquers Britain, would proceed at an early date to invade the United States; and if not that, just what is the nature of the threat to us that Nazi victory would be. This, too, is a question already decided. It was decided the day we began our large program of armament for defense. Unless we are arming for defense against possible consequences of an Axis victory, we have no reason for arming at all. In the event of British victory, our need for armament will be no greater than it was before the war began. A victorious Britain, a Britain continuing in control of the sea, would be for the United States restoration of the comfortable status of before the war. We arm because of some condition we apprehend would arise, sooner or later, in the event of Nazi victory. Whether the apprehended condition would be immediate attempt at invasion, or attempt some years hence, or infiltration of the Nazi system into Latin America, or Nazi domination of the world and the consequence of that to us—to debate about that at this stage is to debate about a decision already made.

SOME OF THE advocates of the bill hesitate to admit some of its necessary or probable consequences. They insist that the bill would not lead to "participation in war." Yet the actions by the United States which this bill contemplates, or which are extremely likely to arise, can hardly be described as short of participation in war. There is a clue in the Administration's reluctance to accept certain amendments proposed by Mr. Willkie and others. Mr. Willkie's proposal was that the President be permitted to send arms only to three nations specifically named—Britain, Greece and China. To this, answer is made that such an amendment might harmfully limit what it might be desirable for the President to do in the event of the spread of the war to take in other countries. Clearly the bill contemplates that the President shall be free to send arms to whatever nation he thinks may be a help in resisting the Axis powers. The exercise of this discretion can hardly be short of participation in war. If we wished to remain out of participation, we would give arms to Britain only. We would leave it to Britain to distribute some of the arms to other nations in her discretion. That would leave the responsibility for management of the war in Britain's hands wholly. Yet it is desirable that the President should have discretion to transfer arms to other nations. Situations may arise more or less unrelated to the war against the Axis—it may be desirable for the President to send arms to a Latin-American nation.

THE PRINCIPLE of the lease-lend bill is that the President shall have great power. Opponents of the bill can make headway only as they present some alternative measure which would achieve the same end, but give less power to the President. Once the principle of the bill is accepted, that the President should have much discretionary power, attempts to limit the power become difficult or meaningless. The amendments that have most value are those which so far as possible retain power in Congress, make it necessary for the President to consult with the leaders of Congress.

Senators Begin Planning Balanced Peacetime Budget

Three Senators began yesterday the admittedly difficult job of supplying Congress with "plans for an automatically balanced budget in times of peace."

"We're really going to do something about this," said Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, sponsor of the resolution that created the group and chairman of the special committee that includes Senators Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Holman (Republican), of Oregon.

Tydings said the group already had accumulated a "tremendous amount of data" that may make it unnecessary to hold public hearings. The Senate gave the committee $10,000 of its funds along with powers to survey all Government income and expenditures over the last ten years, including constant deficits and possible new ways of raising revenue.

'Defense Migrant' Termed New Social Problem

"A new kind of American migrant," the man looking for a defense industry job, is taking to the road in a movement affecting hundreds of thousands of families, Representative Sparkman (Democrat), of Alabama, asserted yesterday.

Sparkman introduced a resolution to extend the life of the House Committee on Migrant Labor for two years, with investigation concentrated on problems of the "defense migrant."

Skilled workers and their families moving to assured jobs in defense industry centers will number at least 1,000,000 persons, Sparkman estimated.

Letters supporting the resolution for extension of the migrant labor investigation, sent by Federal Security Administrator McNutt and Defense Commissioners Davis and Elliott, were released yesterday by Representative Tolan (Democrat), of California.

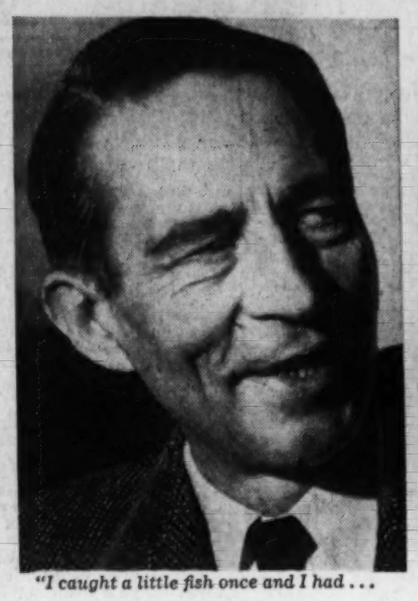
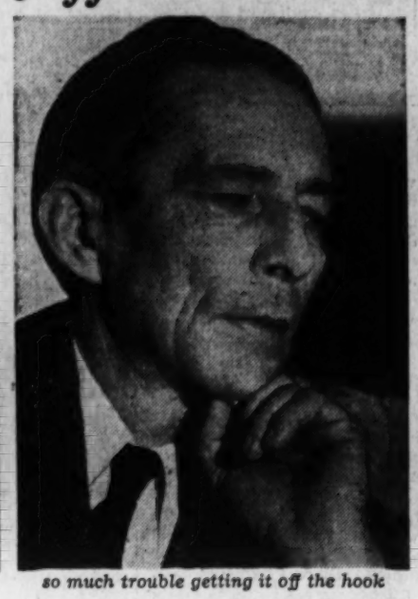
Poet Robinson Jeffers Is the Mildest of Men



"I caught a little fish once and I had . . .



so much trouble getting it off the hook

. . . I never fished again.

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

A wind-and-sun-stung man, spare of frame and spare of speech, came from the Pacific Coast yesterday, "where the mountains and trees fall down to the sea," to talk diffidently about the struggles of a creative mind.

He is Robinson Jeffers, a man who shuns the public gaze, who will open a series of readings and talks by distinguished American poets at 8:45 p. m. today at the Library of Congress. It is his first venture on the lecture platform. The series on "The Poet and Democracy" is sponsored by the Library and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

Jeffers has no mental index of his work. He confessed he is amazed at what the professors say about him. The professorial tags of "pantheist," "symbolist," "glorifier of the unconscious," bring a frown to his calm, lined face.

Jeffers is—Robinson Jeffers, an American who wrote verse for 22 years before "I was satisfied I was beginning to mature." He is an American who wandered far before he came home to find his roots in the rocky Carmel Coast of California, "where the mountains climb 2,000 feet."

In the people of the lonely stretch of coast and in the "ruggedness of the country itself where the hawks are always wheeling overhead," Jeffers said he found the raw material for what he wanted to say. There he built his house of rocks with his own hands and there he took his wife, Una, whom he married in 1913.

"We expected to go on to England in 1914 after a short stay in Carmel," he said yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, where he and his wife are guests. "We expected to go on, but when war broke out we decided to stay. Apparently the war isn't over for us yet, for we've never left."

At the age of 54 now, Jeffers hesitates to generalize on the problems of the creative mind today.

"You cannot say this man has a future, or that man has passed his prime," he said. "You cannot say that certain men have influenced certain other men. You cannot be that exact.

"When I consider the future of many young men and think it may be disappointing, I think how completely disappointing I was at 30."

"I honestly doubt if a person matures until he's 30," he said. "Sometimes it is much older than that."

These, he believes, are blessings of maturity:

"To fasten on one section for your home."

"To have children."

"To work both outdoors and indoors."

At 30, Jeffers had traveled widely. He had written verse since he was 8 years old with little success. He had studied medicine and physiology and had taught for a short period in a dental school.

"Then I learned that the business of people who want to write is to write exactly what they come upon. I came on the Carmel Coast, and that is what I've written about."

From the attic of Tor House, the home he built overlooking the sea, came the verse which gained him recognition. "Tamar" in 1924 was followed by "The Roan Stallion" in 1925, "Cawdor," 1928, "Dear Judas," 1929, "Give Your Heart to the Hawks," 1933, and more recent volumes.

The human tragedy in his verse stems directly from the influence of the desolate country in which they live, he says. He admits the influence of the pantheism and neo-Platonism of Wordsworth and Shelley and the Greeks. His poetry is filled with human conflict and crimes of passion.

Yet Jeffers himself is the mildest of men. His country is overrun by deer and wild boars, but he does not hunt. Does he fish?

"I caught a little fish once and I had so much trouble getting it off the hook I never fished again. I'd much rather look at them."

This is Jeffers' first journey to Washington since he was a child. He confesses he is amazed at the courtesies extended him and the interest in his work.

He likes the city. "But I'll be glad to get back home. I have another book coming out in the fall. It's a story similar in some ways to those I've told before in verse. It's set in the present time. There's a radio going with the characters hearing about this war that's on. I think it will be titled 'The Cause.'"

A previously unpublished poem by Robinson Jeffers entitled "For U. J." appears on the editorial page of The Post today. It is dedicated to his wife, Una Jeffers.

The closing lines of "Bixby's Landing" could only have been written in the solitude of Tor House:

"Wine-hearted solitude, our mother the wilderness,
"Men's failures are often as beautiful as men's triumphs, but your returnings
"Are even more precious than your first presence."

Papa is a polar bear, mamma is a brown;
They're about the rarest pair, in or out of town.

Therefore I'm a hybrid cub, really on the level;
Keeper calls me Beelzebub, says I'm just a devil.

Guess I'll try a getaway, chewing bars and wire;
Tell him I went thataway, if he should inquire.

Reckon I'll not do it, though, a second thought I'm giving;
Free board and room is better, no? Than working for a living.

Model Railroad Built For Dads to Play With

Nearly a half-mile of miniature railroad is a-building down at Union Station and there isn't a kid in town with a chance of playing with it.

There are 1,500 feet of "O-Gauge" track—that's the width that usually comes with Christmas trains—and 1,000 feet of "H-O Gauge," also pretty popular with little boys who are always trying to muscle in on the old man's fun at home.

Furthermore, the rails are made of steel, not tinplate, and are set on ties and synthetic rock ballast and there's no center rail to mar the drawn-from-life perfection. Locomotives, coaches and freight cars are made to exact scale right down to their tiny couplings.

There is a maze of switches that a miniature railroader

could only describe as soul-filling. What looks like a whole continent of mountains is being raised and satisfyingly honeycombed with tunnels.

The railroads—the "O-Gauge" is known as the Metropolitan Southern, the "H-O Gauge" as the Metropolitan Eastern—are being built and operated by the Metropolitan Society of Model Engineers, Washington Branch of the National Model Railroad Association.

The society has about 50 members, and it's safe to say that fully 90 per cent of them are the result of one of two frustrations: Either in their youth circumstances compelled them to play with wind-up trains, if any, or they have more lately encountered tyranny in the playroom.

"The society limits memberships to persons over 18," explained Lloyd C. Mayers, one of the members, yesterday. "Many of us have sons and once in a while we let the boys come up and look, but they have to keep their hands in their pockets."

The railroads are being built in a room 131 feet long and 26 feet wide in the offices section of Union Station. The society pays $1 a year for its quarters. Construction began a year ago last August and while it will take at least another year to complete both lines there's plenty of track available for test operations.

In fact, test operations constitute a serious obstacle to progress.

"Members of the society work on the railroads every Monday and Friday night," Mayers said. "Along about 10 o'clock someone brings out a locomotive which he wants to run 'just to see if everything's working right.' Right then everyone stops building."

Now the society is getting into shape a special "H-O Gauge" exhibit for a hobby show to be held March 4 to 9 in the Wardman Park Hotel.

Prelude to Spring Decorations

Slipcovers today give a room the same effect as a well-tailored suit. Left—The plaid slipcover and window drapes have transformed the living room into a spring symphony. New Fabrics Make Ideal Slipcovers

This is one of a series of articles providing up-to-date information for the consumer.

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

FOR a tonic for jaded winter spirits, go to the yard goods departments in the local stores and feast your eyes on the gay new designs in floral, plaids and stripes blossoming on every counter. The manufacturers have not overlooked any type of material in their spring offerings for slipcovers, draperies and household decorations.

Martha Ellyn

The big news in home furnishings this season is coordinated fabrics, according to the Cotton Textile Institute. Most of these coordinated groups contain a plain, a floral and a geometric figure or stripe on sateen, twill or chintz ground. Some repeat the same design on different weaves. Thus you can slipcover one chair in plaid, and pick up one of its predominating hues for another slipcover in solid colors. Still another may be in a not too bold stripe combination, using some of the other plaid tones as a guide for complete harmony.

The skill and ingenuity with which leading manufacturers have adapted ideas in handloomed fabrics to machine production has produced textured cottons of striking originality. Dramatic use is made of ratine, cotton loop and chenille yarns. Metallic printing has been made as permanent as the colors with which it is used. Interesting, also, are two-faced fabrics which show stripes on one side and geometrics on the other.

In weaves, nubby grounds, twills, chevrons, diagonals, jacquards and tweedy cottons are popular. Prints, however, are the big news, with naturalistic florals leading. Stripes, too, are much in demand; plaids are newer and checks are newest. For unpretentious room, gingham, seersucker, percale, dotted Swiss, dimity and organdie are favored.

Pink and Rose Tones Favored

In colors, the entire range of pink and rose tones rates top honors. Turquoise and medium blues follow, with sunny yellows, yellow-greens, mauve tones and tomato red adding important new notes.

But before you go forth to buy the fabrics, be sure to take measurements carefully. You'll find there's a saving in the use of 36-inch materials, providing the back and arm pieces can be cut from the width. For large chairs, 50-inch materials are usually better and are advantageous for small ones when the back or arm pieces can be cut from half the width.

There are certain important steps to remember if you want to accomplish an expensive-looking upholstery job. Measurements are taken from the floor. Begin by measuring the back length from the floor to the top. Then measure the front-back from the top to the seat. Continue from the back of the seat, across to the front and down to the floor. Side measurements are taken next, doubling the arm-to-seat measurement. Measure outside length from the top of the arm to the floor and double that measurement. Finally, take the measurement of the length of the cushion and double it.

The easiest procedure is to make a muslin pattern first, cutting out each piece, pin-fitting it carefully and marking the names on each piece. Then cut the fabric according to the muslin pattern. Electric scissors will do a quick and accurate job. Notch the material according to the muslin pattern. Next, pin-fit the fabric on the chair again. And be sure that the design of the fabric is properly placed and matching. Finally, stitch all seams on the wrong side of the material and use the cording foot of the machine to stitch the binding into place between each two pieces of material.

Heretofore, slipcovers were generally thought of as a protective covering for the winter furnishings against dust and sunlight during summer months. But now they are an important part of the decoration scheme. Twice a year, early spring and fall, women are redecorating their homes, as far as slipcovers and curtains are concerned.

Materials Are Buget Price

With all the vast array of smart new slipcover and curtain materials costing as little at 49 cents a yard, there's no excuse for any woman to blame her budget for time stained upholstery and dingy curtains this spring, if she will make sewing her hobby. All the latest dressmaker finishes that decorators love to use are right at the finger tips of any seamstress if she will make use of the modern sewing machine equipment. The instructor in sewing departments will teach all the modern foolproof short cuts. Nowadays, foolproof attachments for sewing machines dispose of applique work, binding, pleating and ruffling and all the other smart finishes that used to require patience and great skill.

Take your choice from the great selection of sturdy cotton damasks, poplins, chintzes, reps, sateens, denims and linens that are as gay as they are practical and thrifty. Plaids that combine bold, clear colors with delicate pastels are 1941 style favorites. Heavy plaid cottons alternate blue and red stripes on a white background, or combine clear tones with pastels against a white background overlaid with faint white line checks. Or you can take your pick of splashy florals or a variety of bold Regency stripes.

Proper Insulation Saves Up to Half On the Fuel Bill

Stoking a coal furnace will bring out the brute in the meekest man. Heavens, we've even known the temperamental thermostat of an oil burner to drive a gentle man to profanity. So it has been a real service to the Nation for the University of Illinois to devote serious scientific research to problems of home heating. The results of their efforts are already incorporated into the designs for new heating units, while many of their recommendations are available for all of us to help ourselves.

Proper insulation has been proved to save up to half on the fuel bill, while radiators finished with oil paint are about 10 per cent more efficient than when covered with metallic paint. As for radiator shields, they're most efficient when they inclose the radiator on the top and the wall sides, leaving front and sides open. The asbestos paper covering of the hot-air ducts causes more heat loss than bright metal outside finishes for these pipes, contrary to popular opinion.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Two Years a Widower, Man Hasn't Yet Adjusted To Loss of His Wife, and Thinks Second Marriage Might Be Sacreligious; Asks Appraisal of His Views

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was most interested in your reply to "Avis" some weeks ago—who asked your opinion of the advisability of accepting a young man's attentions five months after her husband's death. Her case is somewhat similar to mine. My wife died two years ago, and it was six months before I again took up a social life, by going to a party, which I found diverting. I agree with your verdict given to "Avis," and particularly with your remark: "There is no merit in sentimental, prolonged preoccupation with memory of the dead. One's first obligation is to life," etc.

However, I am by nature a very sentimental person, and it is my honest opinion that sentimental persons suffer most when death visits their home. Yet I know, too, that time heals all sorrows, and I am more reconciled now than I was at first, to the loss of my wife. But somehow I cannot feel that life will ever mean as much to me again. I go out, now and again, with different girls and enjoy their company, but always there is the feeling that something is missing. Sometimes I think I should marry again. Then, again, such a thought seems sacrilege.

Just what is your opinion, Miss Haworth? My wife died at the age of 28, after we had been very happily married for three years. Death came suddenly, caused by an obscure ailment, and until shortly before the end she had seemed in the best of health. I have tried to tell myself that each of us must die when his hour has struck—and that death in youth is no more lamentable than death in advanced age. But I cannot quite adjust to the abruptness with which death took my wife. However, I know I would feel better if I had your opinions on the subject.

R. T.S.

Man's Attitude Is Slightly Morbid

DEAR R. T. S.: Life without your dearly beloved wife obviously cannot be the same as life with her would have been. Nor is it reasonable to think you ever will find another girl whose personality would complement yours in exactly the same manner hers did. But then, what experience in life ever is identical with a previous experience? How can it be—when we ourselves are continually, subtly changing, thus bringing an altered "sensibility," as it were, to each new day's assorted experiences? And what personality ever is shaped to the precise pattern and nuance of another's?

If you "have a feeling that something is missing," in your widower's association with girls, it probably means, only, that unconsciously you are comparing your companion of the hour with your late wife—instead of "grading" that companion on her individual merit. You are looking, among other girls, for one who might seem to give promise of being a synthetic substitute for what you have lost—instead of cleanly breaking with the past, to which "finis" is written, and turning yourself full-face to the future, and to such fresh, different and further-developing social alliances and experiences as the future, in any case, may rightfully be expected to provide.

Your sometime notion that it is sacrilegious to think of marrying again has a morbid taint. It implies that you feel a closer identification with the dead than with the living; that you are more preoccupied with the past than reactive to the present; and that, in a sense, you are evading or denying the fact that death has taken your wife.

Your futile speculations concerning the whys and wherefores of the phenomenon of death are likewise unhealthful. For all save the scientist, death—when it strikes—is simply an awful fact that must be accepted. When confronting the catastrophic fact of the death of a loved one, it is sane and healthful for the average layman to focus his mental faculties strictly on the business of recovering from the blow. He should welcome every socially approved opportunity which promises to deliver him from the melancholy spell of bereavement, and he should vigorously forswear any inclination to withdraw into himself and feed on memories of what has been, and will not be again.

My opinion is that you should marry again—providing you choose your second wife for her own sweet sake, and not for any real or fancied resemblance to your first wife; and providing you permit the new marriage to take on its own unique form, without trying to shape it to the pattern of the first, or holding it in question for any marked departures therefrom.

Met Singer Parts With Her Beauty Secrets

By Ida Jean Kain

AS SOON as a songbird signs for Hollywood, she becomes a stickler for perfection. No matter how good her figure is, it's got to be better.

So it isn't surprising to find Rise Stevens, one of the Metropolitan Opera's bona fide beauties, is now engaged in a fiercely waged program of slimming. Just what Miss Stevens hopes to lose is not apparent—She is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 135 pounds and measures: Bust, 35 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 35 inches.

It is hard to see how she can improve on these specifications. But her program is such a well rounded combination of calisthenics, massage and outdoor activity backed up with common sense in eating, that many of you could adopt it to advantage.

She has one-half hour of what she calls gymnastics plus one-half hour of massage every day. And daily she takes a couple of turns around the Central Park reservoir—favorite exercise spot of celebrities in New York.

These Exercises Mean Work

The gymnastics are far from being cissified. Here is a sample: Squat down on the right knee, with left leg thrust straight out at side. Now, shift weight from right knee to left, squatting on it with other leg thrust out to side. The hitch, you will discover, is in having the feet far enough but not too far apart and in keeping the feet parallel. While doing this, of course, you are supposed to hold your back nice and straight.

Another of her favorites is to lie on the back on the floor and "reach" one leg straight up in the air, keeping the other flat down on the floor. As you reach up with the leg, keep pushing up with the hips and arching the back until you are as high as you can go with that foot. Rest, and repeat with the other leg.

You can do quite a few exercises of that kind in half an hour—if you work. And Rise likes to top off with massage. If you cannot manage that, however, you can do rolling exercises which give superb results. The wind-up to Rise's gymnastics is a good floor massage. Just lie full length and roll, over and over, first in one direction, then in the other.

Concentrate on Hipline

To concentrate your floor massage on the hipline, lie on the back with arms extended straight out at sides shoulder-level, knees flexed and feet on floor. Hoist the hips off the floor, turn slightly to bring a fat pad into range, and come down on the floor with a thud. Keep hoisting, turning and thumping until you have covered the hipline.

Although she herself needs no coaching in posture—singers learn quickly to carry themselves beautifully—Rise believes the average woman could improve, and that she would make bore effort to do so with a penalty attached for failure. So she suggests that instead of practically walking correctly with a book balanced on the head, you do your stint with a plate balanced on your head.

If you are only a few pounds overweight, she believes in "cutting out the sweets, pastries and heavy foods"—besides, she points out, they are bad for the complexion.

You will be seeing Rise Stevens soon with Nelson Eddy in her first picture. Let's see what you can do with your figure in the meantime!

Jewelry Matches Prints

Hollywood, Calif. — Priscilla Lane has the feminine half of the town agog over her clever matching of jewelry to new midseason prints. With a resort shirtmaker showing tiny coral shells on a white ground, the skirt tied on like a sarong, Priscilla wears a choker of small white shells each tipped with a bead of genuine coral. The same idea with a unique bamboo print: Brown silk shantung, the skirt border printed with a row of natural bamboo sticks. Then dangling from one wrist a bracelet of pee wee bamboos.

Cheshire Grin, Good Face Lifter

Hollywood, Calif. — Priscilla Lane, a member of the "white-collar" contingent as a basement-store clerk in "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America," advises all working girls to give themselves some kind of nightly facial to erase the day's "business lines" for a more alluring expression.

Priscilla suggests her own honey mask spread over a film of cleansing cream, after first massaging the face with upward movements and concentrating on the areas about the mouth and eyes. Also try a Cheshire grin, while taking your bath, to lift the tired muscles.

Calendar Crowded In Spite of Lent

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THAT LENTEN LULL Washington society was all prepared to welcome seems to have slipped into the distant future. Yesterday's calendar carried a full quota of parties, and the schedule for the next few days is almost as crowded as it has been any time this season.

Several topflight dinners had dozens of Capitalites out and about last night. United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., and Mrs. Biddle feted the new Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, who recently arrived in Washington. The party took place at the 1925 F Street Club, and among the guests were Count Potocki, former Polish Ambassador, and Countess Potocka; several members of the Diplomatic Corps and the official contingent, and a few residential Washingtonians.

Smaller dinner parties flourished all over town last night—with two of them taking place in Dutch households. The Netherlands Naval Attache and Mme. Meijer Ranneft entertained a company of eight; and the First Secretary of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. van Houten feted the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon.

Guests at the Ranneft party included Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes, the Netherlands Minister Counselor and Baroness van Boetzelaer, Capt. Karl Wessel, Swedish Military Attache, and Mme. Wessel, and Capt. James O. Gawne, U. S. N., and Mrs. Gawne.

Two Bostonians Are Feted

Mrs. Robert Cutler, of Boston, was the guest in whose honor her sister, Mrs. Arthur Fowler, gathered in a congenial company for an informal dinner at her home on LeRoy Place. Covers were laid for 14.

Another visiting Bostonian, Mrs. Edward Logan, took over her share of the social spotlight yesterday when she was feted at a luncheon given by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty in the latter's apartment at 1868 Columbia Road. The house guest of Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Mrs. Logan, has been honored at a number of parties since she arrived here a few days ago.

The luncheon for her yesterday drew a company of 12, including Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, Mrs. Charles B. Drake, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Bruce Kremer and Mrs. Lewis Sander.

Social Notes From the South

Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox, who are on board the U. S. S. Sequoia will stop briefly in Palm Beach to visit friends before continuing their cruise in southern waters. In their party are Mrs. Knox's sister, Miss Adelia Reid, and Col. Knox's aid, Capt. M. J. Deyo.

En route to Palm Beach, the party stopped off for a day in St. Augustine, Fla., where the Secretary and Capt. Deyo took time out for a game of golf, and then, with Mrs. Knox and Miss Reid were feted at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Cox Spades at the fashionable St. Augustine Links Clubhouse.

Another Capitalite now enjoying the Florida sunshine is Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who left Washington a few days ago and is the guest of Mrs. Barron Collier at the latter's home on tropical Useppa Island. Later, Mrs. Hitchcock will go to visit friends at Miami Beach. She expects to return here the latter part of next month.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Mrs. Eugene Villaret will entertain at a cocktail party on Saturday afternoon in honor of Col. W. E. Shipp, newly appointed United States military attache at Yugoslavia . . . Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, has cards out for a luncheon on Wednesday, March 12 . . . In Washington for an indefinite stay are Mr. and Mrs. William M. V. Hoffman, of New York City and Tuxedo Park. They arrived here yesterday from St. Augustine, Fla., after having spent some time in Havana, Cuba, and Palm Beach.

Archduke Felix To Visit Here

Archduke Felix will come to town again tomorrow and will be the houseguest overnight of Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris. They will entertain at a luncheon for him tomorrow following his lecture at 11 o'clock at the Shoreham, under the auspices of the Town Hall, on "Is a United States of Europe Possible?"

That night Mr. and Mrs. Morris will give a dinner for young people in honor of the archduke. His older brother, Archduke Otto, claimant of the throne of the nonexistent Austro-Hungarian Empire, spent several days with the Morrises earlier this season.

Several Washington debutantes have been chosen to usher at the archduke's lecture. They include the Misses Sita Finkenstaedt, Patricia Piochnik, Patricia Hill, Suzanne Slingluff and Achsah Dorsey.

Archduke Felix will leave Washington Saturday morning.

James Cromwell Arrives Here From Palm Beach

James H. R. Cromwell has arrived in Washington after a stay in Palm Beach with his mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury. It has been reported that Mr. Cromwell would leave in the near future for England to study conditions there preparatory to a lecture tour.

Just arrived in Palm Beach are Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, of Washington. They are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Aksel C. P. Wichfeld for several weeks.

Fuenteses Will Leave for Chile

Although the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes have just returned here from Mexico City they will be off again shortly—this time to Chile. Dr. Fuentes has been transferred to the embassy there as Counselor.

They will sail on March 15 on board the Santa Elena for Valparaiso. From there they will travel to Santiago. Dr. Fuentes left here early in the fall to join his wife and children, Berta and Carlos, in Mexico City, where they had been since June. At present the Fuentes family is stopping at Hotel 2400. They will leave here March 11.

Mr. Waller in Army, Wife Returns to Job

Now that her husband is an Army trainee, Mrs. Robert Melvin Waller is planning to return to the office of her father, Representative Edouard Victor Izac, as a secretary. The former Miss Happy Izac and Mr. Waller, of Danville, Va., were married recently.

Mr. Waller will be stationed at Fort Meade temporarily. He was inducted into the service on Monday.

MISS ANN ELIZABETH SWANSON,
whose engagement to William Leopold Shea is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Swanson. The bride-elect attended Holton Arms School and is now studying at Chevy Chase Junior College. Mr. Shea, the son of Mrs. W. E. Shea, of Washington and the late William Shea, is a graduate of Georgetown University and attended Georgetown Law School. The marriage will take place in the autumn

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

DARK AND deserted for the last three months, the Canadian Legation is expected to become a social center again with the arrival of the new Minister, Leighton McCarthy. Though 71, he is famous as a bon vivant and enjoys entertaining. With Canada at war, his partying naturally will not be just for fun, but of the purposeful variety.

DUDLEY HARMON

The new Minister is married, but his wife will not accompany him here. Besides being a trustee of the Warm Springs Foundation, Mr. McCarthy owns a home at the health resort.

UNUSUAL is the fact that there are now actually two Canadian envoys to Washington. Able Loring Christie has not resigned, but is only on leave of absence because of his health, his many friends will be glad to learn. The Christies are planning a trip to South Carolina shortly, so the Minister can convalesce from the illness which began on his honeymoon. In two or three months he expects to be on active duty again.

Since their wedding in December, Mrs. Christie has hardly been in Washington long enough to inspect her wedding presents. She is here now for a few days as the guest of Mrs. Kent Legare, and is getting the legation ready for Mr. McCarthy.

THE APPOINTMENT of Hume Wrong as Counselor of the Legation, with Merchant Mahoney, is of interest here. Mr. Wrong was a member of the Legation staff some years ago. With his wife, he was in Geneva with the International Labor Office until the war forced the organization to move to Canada. Since then the Wrongs have been dodging bombs in London, only returning to Canada a few weeks ago. There's a possibility they may make their home at the Legation with Mr. McCarthy.

THE ATMOSPHERE of the Canadian Legation has been sad in more ways than one this winter. The staff must get along on much reduced salaries—20 per cent is lost through the exchange, and they have all had cuts because of the war. Still another cut is expected shortly.

One couple at the Legation—the wife is English—were planning to give their first big party in Washington one day last December. That morning she received word her son, who was with the Royal Air Force, was killed in Egypt. A few weeks later came the news that it had been a mistake; he was still alive, and in an Italian prison camp. Just as his mother was rejoicing, the son was sent out on duty again and this time was really killed. Another very sad touch to the story is that letters he mailed before his death still are being received here by his parents.

THE NORWEGIAN MINISTER, just back from his country's training camp in Canada, was telling friends the other night that there are 700 Norwegians there. Some were already in this country; others escaped from Norway, many crossing the ocean in their own small fishing boats. When they have completed a six months course in flying, they will be sent to England to fight.

Bernt Balchen, famous Norwegian flyer, was until recently an instructor at the camp. Now he is ferrying the new American bombers over to England.

A REUNION in New Orleans is being enjoyed by several from Washington. Mrs. Demarest Lloyd has paused there on her way to Mexico City and Mrs. Cary Langhorne has just arrived from Hobe Sound. Griffith Warfield and Oliver Hammonds are also there, the latter to see his fiancee, Ellen Flowerree. All took part in the famous Mardi Gras festivities on Tuesday.

Miss Morison Visiting in D. C.

Miss Elizabeth Morison, of Boston, is in Washington to visit Miss Elizabeth Longley. They are staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. LeCron, on Hoban Road.

For several years until last fall Miss Morison made her home in Washington. On Tuesday she was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Joseph Reinstein. Miss Morison will be here until Saturday.

Mrs. MacLeish Entertains Arcade Workers

Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, wife of the Librarian of Congress, gave a tea yesterday at her home in Georgetown. Guests were members of the executive committee and heads of shops for the Picadilly Arcade, a bazaar to be held April 3, 4 and 5 for the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund.

The guests yesterday included the following workers for the sale: Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. James Forrestal, Mrs. George Baker, Mrs. Keith Kane, Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Miss Harriet Winslow, Miss Nancy McQuade, Mrs. Kent Legare, Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, Mrs. Warren Austin, Miss Helen Page, Mrs. Courtland Parker, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Philip Coffin, Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett.

Howe-Joers Betrothal Told

Of wide interest in Washington, Virginia and Maryland are two announcements being made in New York this week. Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Kent Howe, of 1120 Fifth Avenue, already have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Elizabeth Bruce Howe, to Midshipman Peter Dierks Joers, son of Mrs. John C. Pickering, of New York and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the late William Harvey Joers.

The bride-elect attended the Brearley School and was graduated from Miss Porter's School. She made her debut in December, 1938, and is a member of the New York Junior League.

Midshipman Joers, who was graduated from the Hill School, is now in his final year at the U. S. Naval Academy.

Mrs. Robert S. Brewster, of 100 East Seventieth Street, New York, and Mount Kisco, has announced the engagementof her daughter, Phyllis Brewster, to John Randolph Burke, son of Mrs. Nicholas P. T. Burke, of Dover, Mass., and the late Mr. Burke, of Alexandria, Va.

Miss Brewster also attended the Brearley School. She is a graduate of Foxcroft, and made her debut in 1933. Her father was the late Robert S. Brewster, of New York.

Ecuadorean Envoy And Wife Joined By His Nephew

The Ecuadorean Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro have been joined by their nephew, Pedro J. Sosa, who has just received a degree in mechanical engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was graduated at the midwinter commencement exercises.

Senor Sosa is the son of Senora Maria Luisa Puig de Sosa, sister of Capt. Alfaro, who makes her home at the Mayflower with the envoy and his wife.

Mrs. MacAuley Gives Birth to Son

Mrs. Wilson Visits New York

Mrs. Hugh R. Wilson, wife of the former Ambassador to Germany, is spending some time in New York. She entertained at a luncheon there on Tuesday at Hampshire House.

Her guests included Mrs. Seton Porter, Miss Julia Berwind, Mrs. Reginald Foster, of Boston; Mrs. James W. Gerard, Baroness de Kleist, Mrs. Hare Lippincott, Mrs. Henry Fletcher, and Mrs. William von Ropp.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies will leave tomorrow for a stay in Palm Beach, accompanied by the latter's daughter, Miss Nadinia Hutton. Miss Hutton will entertain several classmates at her mother's home over the Easter holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Davies have set no definite date for their return to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Wister Randolph, of Washington, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Philip Fell at Hampshire House in New York.

Col. E. M. Spencer, United States Marine Corps, and Mrs. Spencer gave a dance at the Cleveland Park Club recently to celebrate the birthday of their daughter, Bessie Catherine. About 65 young people attended. Miss Helen Spencer assisted her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer B. Morehouse left yesterday for Atlanta, Ga., where Mr. Morehouse will take over duties in connection with his new position under the Department of Justice. Among the farewell parties for the Morehouses was the small dinner given Tuesday evening by Capt. Norman Shaw, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Shaw at the Columbia Country Club. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Collins, Dr. and Mrs. Allan B. Morehouse, Capt. and Mrs. G. E. Bittner, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Morehouse and Miss Betty Sanborn.

Virginia Smith, W. V. Disney Are Married at Foundry Church

Bridegroom Is Son Of Rep. W. E. Disney From Oklahoma

Of interest in Congressional circles was the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Virginia Frayser Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dorrence Yerkes Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., to Wesley Vansant Disney, son of Representative and Mrs. Wesley E. Disney, of Tulsa, Okla.

The ceremony was performed here at the Foundry Methodist Church, the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris officiating in a setting of ferns, palms and Easter lilies. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin made with a 3-yard train. Her veil fell from a Juliet cap fashioned of real lace and she carried white calla lilies.

Miss Fannie Cooper, maid of honor, was dressed in pink taffeta with a matching headdress and a short, pink veil falling from ostrich tips. She carried a sheaf of spring flowers.

Disney was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Frank Penn, of Reidsville, N. C.; Stewart de Gaetano, of Arlington, Va.; John Wilson, of Washington, and William Bowling, of Oklahoma.

Soroptimist Club Told Of Life Amidst Bombs

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

"Bundles for Britain were brought by Soroptimist Club members to the weekly luncheon of the club yesterday at the Willard Hotel and the program included speakers who told how much such bundles were needed.

S. J. B. Hines, who came from England last fall following the first "blitz" against London and is now living here with his son, described some of his experiences during an air raid and told of the stanch spirit of the English people. Mrs. William N. Smith, publicity director of the Washington Committee of Bundles for Britain, of which Mr. Hines is the only man member, also spoke.

A theater audience that refused to miss any of the performance to seek shelter when an air raid warning was given; efforts to get home late at night when all transportation had been suspended; seeking refuge in an air-raid shelter after a bomb had fallen near a bridge which he was crossing afoot, were all part of Mr. Hines' story of his last Saturday evening in London.

He described spending the hours from midnight until dawn in the chill shelter where sleep was impossible because of the cold, the scream of falling bombs, and the pounding of shrapnel on the shelter roof. Despite the discomfort and din, the people kept cheerful and everybody helped everybody else, he said. An Irishman told a stream of funny stories that kept the crowd laughing. After he stopped entertaining, another man began singing popular songs and all joined in. Women in expensive furs and jewels helped care for the children of women from the slums.

Then the lights went out and those who had "torches" took turns using them ten minutes at a time because batteries were hard to obtain.

The next morning on the way home, he told of seeing 11 houses that had been demolished by two bombs. "There was not a rag of clothing left and those who had lived there had no means to buy more," he said, "that is why everything sent from here is a God-send."

He told of the "Spitfire boxes" in private shelters, in which those who take refuge there put "a few coppers nightly." These are collected by air raid wardens each day and help swell the fund for more of the Spitfires which have done such effective work against Nazi raiders.

Mr. Hines quoted one or two recent letters from England. One explained that the writer's family had gotten tired of nights spent in shelters. They now undress and go to bed, putting cotton in their ears. "If a bomb hits you, it will blow your clothes off anyway," said the letter.

People have learned, said Mr. Hines, "that if you can hear a bomb it won't hurt you—and no shelter is a protection against a direct hit, only from shrapnel and debris."

Mrs. Smith also read excerpts from letters which have been received by Bundles for Britain, expressing gratitude. One referred to the time "when this spot of bother is over."

Pullovers, caps, mufflers, comforts and blankets are greatly needed, she said. There is also need for kakhi articles for the army. Most of the knitting so far has been in gray and blue yarn, she said.

Mrs. Lorraine Good, president of the club, presided and the program was in charge of Ethel M. Fistere. Rosemary Ward, a student of Mrs. Jewel Downs at Marjorie Webster School, presented soprano solos, accompanied by Mrs. Downs.

Mortar Board Alumnae Mark Founders' Day

Members of the Washington Alumnae Association of Mortar Board last night observed the organization's Founders' Day with their annual banquet. Walter Karig, Washington correspondent for the Newark Evening News, was guest speaker at the affair which was held at the Lee Sheraton Hotel.

Mr. Karig discussed the hearings on the lend-lease bill from the standpoint of a newspaperman "on the Hill," and explained the philosophy underlying the support and the oppesition to the measure.

Mrs. William Clark, president of the association, presided at the banquet. In addition to the alumnae members, there were guests from the active chapters at George Washington and Maryland Universities. Miss Elizabeth Capitaine was chairman of the dinner.

The local alumnae of Mortar Board have been devoting themselves this season to the toy-lending library they have established at Friendship House. The undertaking is their chief project for the year and is now being used by about 90 children weekly. The organization has a membership of 170 in the District.

Officers, in addition to Mrs. Clark, are Miss Laura Osgood, vice president; Mrs. J. F. Kendrick, secretary, and Mrs. Robert Paddock, treasurer.

Public Advised to Question Defense as Price Rise Excuse

Consumers should be skeptical of price increases attributed to the defense program and should be willing to voice and act that skepticism, Dr. Benjamin W. Lewis, chief economist of the National Defense Advisory Commission declared last night.

Addressing a joint meeting of the departments of Government and Foreign Policy and Government and Economic Welfare of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters at the Y. W. C. A., Dr. Lewis explained that the consumer division was making every effort to facilitate consumer awareness and encourage calm and intelligent consumer action in the market place.

"Consumer action must not be hysterical or based upon rumor," he declared. "Therein lies danger.

"So far the effect of the defense effort on prices has been small as measured by a cost of living index," Dr. Lewis asserted. "We do have gradually increasing demand as unemployed people receive employment. This forms one side of the picture. The suppply side is more complicated. The range of possibility of shortages varies from that for certain metals, such as aluminum, where priorities have now been imposed with a consequent limitation on supply to consumers, to that prevailing in the food market, where supplies generally are adequate.

"The basic problem today is production and supply," he continued. "The solution lies with the spirit, energy and intelligence of the people of the country. Prices will go up if supply does not match demand for goods, but we have a tremendous capacity for more goods if we are willing to produce or secure them. If we do not meet this challenge, it is upon consumers that the burden will fall. Consumers must insist on the elimination of all barriers to the fullest and best utilization of every ounce of resources and energy on which we can lay our hands.

"In view of the post World War experience with prices and with the standard of living which has depended to a large extent on prices it is obvious why the consumer division was established in the National Defense Advisory Commission," Dr. Lewis pointed out. "The economic repercussions of the war upon civilians have always been extremely serious," he said.

Colonial Dames Sponsor Lecture On Rumania

The Washington Chapter of the Colonial Dames of America is sponsoring a lecture by Mme. George Boncesco, formerly of the Rumanian Legation, on "Intimate Recollections of Rumania." It will be given Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Gunston Hall, 1906 Florida avenue.

Mme. Boncesco had many interesting experiences in the last World War and at that time did volunteer nursing in the hospital at Bucharest, where Queen Marie was a frequent visitor.

There will also be a musical program by Miss Minna Nieman, who studied in Vienna and at the Royal Conservatory in Karlsruhe. She is now head of the music department at Gunston Hall school.

The program will be given for the benefit of a scholarship fund maintained by the Colonial Dames. It is open to the public and tickets are in charge of Mrs. William A. Scully, active chairman, at 2431 Kalorama road.

Madame Chairman

MRS. SADIE ORR DUNBAR, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will spend little time in Washington between now and the end of her administration in May.

March 9, Mrs. Dunbar leaves for a swing through Western and Middle Western States. She will go first to her home in Portland, Oreg., to visit her daughter for a week, and from there go to Reno, Nev., Las Vegas, N. Mex., and Pasadena, Calif.; then to Carlsbad, N. Mex., and Chickasha, Okla., to attend conventions of the State federations there. From Oklahoma she will go to Salina, Kans., and from Salina will go to Abilene, Kans., to spend a day with Mrs. John Edward Johntz, chairman of the credentials committee for the triennial convention of the federation to be held in Atlantic City in May.

Her next stop will be in Columbia, Mo., where she will attend the Consumer Education Institute at Stephens College. From there she will go to South Bend, Ind., to address the annual meeting of the county tuberculosis association, headed by Irma Colmar, a friend of many years standing. Mrs. Dunbar and she were members of the first tuberculosis insitute training class held in New York City in 1916.

The general federation president will return to Washington April 12 to wind up her work looking toward the convention and the close of her constructive three years as head of the organization.

COWORKERS—Last Sunday I was much impressed with the spirit of joining hands for the common good, evident following the conference of presidents of the five international selective service clubs for women. At the end of an all-day meeting they had outlined definite points of cooperation.

'In unity there is strength," declared Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the American Federation of Soroptimists. "We are all convinced more than ever that there is room for all of us, and it is cooperation, not competition, that will help us individually and enable us all to be of the greatest service in the emergency."

It is likely, from now on, that the heads of these organizations will confer at least once yearly to discuss common problems and means of working together for the good of all.

ADD ANOTHER—The newest name on the roll of life members for the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission is that of Mrs. Arno L. Roach, of Kansas City, Mo. She was formerly Miss Ruth Robinson, secretary to Dr. R. H. Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church, of this city.

This makes seven life members of the auxiliary which just founded this class of membership at the beginning of the present effort opened a few weeks ago to reach 1,000 members by next October. The others are Mrs. Mary Groverman, Mrs. W. T. Gill, Miss Margery T. Leavy, Mrs. Wilbur Ackley, Mrs. Jean Bennett and Miss Marjorie Webster.

Miss Charlotte Darrow, honorary life president of the auxiliary, is head of one team in the merbership campaign and Mrs. Wilbur Harrison, the other.

The Unready Republic—Individualism Hampers Coordination in America

Many Types of People, Universal Yen to 'Get Ahead' Found Chief Bars to Reorganized Economy

By Duncan Aikman

(Copyright 1941, By The Newspaper P. M., Inc.)

This business of coordinating the country's resources and regions for defense and better mass living gets back very soon, of course, to the people. For the kind of coordination we have been talking about is a fairly drastic project. If it does not exactly mean altering our economic system fundamentally, it does mean pretty fundamentally changing some of its objectives.

AIKMAN

On the defense side, it means concentrating our industrial activities on turning out guns and materials and gadgets for our—and Great Britain's—armies and navies, and giving the normal routine of supplying the regular customers, balancing ledgers and being "sound" about credit risks more or less a lick and a promise "for the duration." Coordination for better living requires broader and even more difficult adjustments. It means reorganizing business and industry and finance—and labor unions and agriculture as well—to build up higher mass purchasing power throughout the land, instead of merely to pile up profits and investment capital at the top as has been our somewhat time-grayed custom.

Naturally, though, we are not likely to get far with enterprises like these unless the American people consciously want their economy to be better coordinated and are thinking about how to go about it. So let's take a look at the American people to see how ready they are for some big coordinating efforts, what they have in the way of impulses and aptitudes in that direction.

Suppose we could see the American people—all 131,000,000 of us, except about 11,000,000 children in bed, perhaps—in a kind of Saturday night pageant.

There would be downtown crowds in most of the large cities a good deal like the crowds you see around Forty-second and Broadway—crowds in rather glittery clothes, wearing a hard, we-know-what-pleasure-is, slightly show-off air. In thousands upon thousands of little cities—the true "Main Streets"—there would be millions and millions of people in more awkward and less assured crowds: Townspeople and country people, come out for their marketing and window-shopping, their movies or Saturday night beer busts, blocking traffic with sociabilities, and often leaving more tobacco juice on the sidewalks than their chambers of commerce would advertise.

There would be hordes—hundreds of thousands, certainly—of spectacularly prosperous and sometimes appallingly rich people, partying in expensive places, including their own streamlined estates and apartments, trading the business and social gossip of their circles, talking about expensive sports and amusements and of how dreadful it is the times do not permit them to hold securely on to their wealth and to have more authority in the republic. There would be a few million Negroes in the South going in and out of white men's stores timidly, and returning to the streets of their own "darktowns" to cavort and show off among each other with a kind of gay bravado.

There would be toughish young men hanging around scores of thousands of rather cheap saloons, beer joints, dance halls, pool parlors, roadhouses, corner cigar and drugstores—or just on corners—making the loud noises and practicing the hard manners and somewhat obscure language which toughish young men cultivate. There would be little highbrow circles—almost as numerous as the rich in the contemporary republic—huddling together for verbal warmth at thousands of "parties;" diagnosing "what it is all about."

There would be solid workmen's families getting together for gaudy lodgefests or mild neighborhood gambling games, or "the boys" trudging out for their pinochle to their favorite staid saloons. There would be millions upon millions of quiet fellows, neither rich nor poverty-stricken, but for the present "getting by" with life, taking their wives or girl friends to the movies, to meetings, to drop in on old friends for a snack and a card foursome, or out for motor rides or petting parties, talking, for the most part, straight personalities and nothing else in the world.

Vary these scenes with a few racial and regional overtones—a few strong foreign accents and mannerisms in places like large Polish and Italian neighborhoods, for instance, or the slightly greater "wildness" of "parties" out Hollywood way—and you get as concrete a picture of the American people's behavior as I know how to give you. Obviously, for all our unifying bonds and interests, we're not the same breed of cats by any means. In fact, you may be inclined to agree with an old New York friend of mine who wisecracked recently: "Why the hell do we chatter about 'understanding' foreign nations when we can't even get the Bronx and Greenwich, Conn., to speak the same language?"

But there are more obstacles to the people's coordinating their affairs than just these obvious type differences. Some of the outstanding likenesses between the groups are in the way quite as much as the differences.

Take the Americans in crowds, for instance. Except for Negroes in the white sections of Southern towns, there isn't a trace of humility or subservience in them. In Latin America, in most of Europe, in Asia, large groups in a crowd—the submerged groups—are always ready to touch hats or make some kind of a formal obeisance to someone. That doesn't happen here. Even the Southern Negroes just do it because it is required. Back in their own districts they put on a strut even racier than a Chicago salesman's on a play night.

Instead of humility, the American crowd is full of a cheerful irreverence for personages overconscious of authority—"the arrogance of elected persons," as Walt Whitman once called it. Its natural butts are umpires, haughty flunkies, overpompous speakers, volunteer orderers-around, cops who "get tough" unnecessarily. Respect for mere position does not come easy to it.

Which brings us to another point about crowds in America. Americans love them—love them for the excitement and the spectacle of "being in on something." But at the same time, they are continually trying to withdraw from them—to put themselves above them. That is what the people who jeer umpires, wisecrack the players, interrupt speakers, shout for Willkie at F. D. R. rallies are trying to do. But millions also do it without noise or exhibitionism. Whether it's a game or a movie or an earnest mass meeting for the preservation of peace, democracy and female virtue, a light buzz of critical comment is never far off, even with the most enrapt audience. "Whispering in church" is one of the oldest forms of original sin in America.

That is, being a part of a crowd isn't, with Americans, the moral and social end in itself that it is with German Nazis or Soviet Russians; or the lyrically shared emotional experience that it is for Latin Americans.

You have to figure, then, that Americans are startlingly unready for vast coordinating enterprises if they have to be imposed by authoritarian processes from above, and carried on, as in Germany and Russia, by the magic of continuous crowd inebriancies. Even our hottest "crusaders" seldom last a half decade. Americans, in this sense, are allergic to working out coordinations by mass drill and regimentation methods. The coordinations must come—as better mass manners certainly have come to the public since the turn of the century—because millions of individuals have been sold on the fact that there is no other way of achieving better and more comfortable living, and probably it will take more than a war-and-defense crisis ballyhoo to sell it.

And in the working lives of Americans—as contrasted with these characteristics of crowd and social behavior—the obstacles to coordination, if anything, grow bigger.

It is perfectly true, of course, that in 12,000 miles of travel about the United States, I saw any number of vast coordinative enterprises in active and sometimes radiantly successful operation. I saw huge factories and even chains of factories coordinating their affairs with the operations of vast power and transportation and distribution systems and with sales organizations reaching abroad into five continents. I saw workers coordinating their interests—sometimes more successfully than others—in enormous unions.

But, in a sense, these were all relatively narrow coordinations. They are not the coordinations between conflicting interests and regions, between seemingly unrelated economic activities, which we need if we are to utilize the national physical plant's full productivity and feed, house and "begadget" ourselves as the people universally desire.

In the several thousand personal contacts I made on my journey, for instance, I never met an industrialist who was seriously wrestling with the problem of how new customers could be built up for him in some other industry. I never met a labor union committee which was trying to build up purchasing power for the end products of its members among the farmers. I met plenty of chamber of commerce officials who were trying to bring new factories to Bingville. But I never met one who was going out of his way to promote more jobs and higher wages—and therefore more customers for Bingville products—in Zilchburg. Or a farmer hot for union pay and shorter hours, and consequently increased workers' truck garden purchases, in the pearest county seat.

It doesn't take much investigation to track down the "why" of these attitudes. From assembly line to front office, from hop-pickers to bankers, I practically never found an American—apart from members of a few leftist fixed-idea groups—who did not feel a kind of inbred, passionate conviction that working for himself, or at broadest for his special group interests, was the last word in sensible economic conduct. Let other individuals and groups work out their own troubles, is a kind of unspoken national motto, and devil take the hindmost—very much including your potential customers.

Some 131,000,000 people want to "live better," but they want to live better as self-sustaining, dependence-free individuals. Even when they want the Government to "help them," or society to organize itself to "help them," they want it to help them to become just that.

Busted tenant farmers and migratory farm workers out West told me how they could "get ahead" if they could only sink a plow once more in a piece of "halfway decent" land. Business men, including some immensely rich ones, told me how their enterprises would "go places" if Government would only give them a "free field" and "restore confidence." Workingmen, unionized and otherwise, felt all would be well if the automatic assembly line processes and the bureaucratic shop management methods of big industry would only unravel themselves so as to restore old fashioned "chances of advancement."

Smart young newspapermen, tied for life, as they feared, to jobs in middlesized Midwestern cities, believed they could "hit the jackpots" if they could only travel around the country learning new things and testing new openings, as the "old-timers" once did. "This sho' would be a fine country for a colored man," an unemployed Negro told me between fish-nibbles off a pier near Miami, "if the steady jobs jist lasted."

But none of these people said they wanted, or consciously seemed to want, the coordinations between regions and rival industries and classes which would make life easier and living better for people who had to stay in the same places, till the same crops, feed the same assembly lines and balance the same profit ledgers. They wanted "better living," but first they wanted their old freedom of movement, their old chances of "getting ahead" back.

In a survey of resistances to coordinations for defense or better living, this psychological yearning for personal success, for "getting ahead," is, as I saw it, an overwhelming key factor. For better or worse—definitely for worse, as their frontiers pass and their world grows more static—the people in the United States are ensnared in what I am tempted to call the paradox of democracy.

The paradox has been taught by elders and teachers for so long now that it has virtually entered the national bloodstream. And it is this: Democracy being a place where all men can rise in the world, not to make some progress during a lifetime toward enrolling yourself in its aristocracy, is a form of failure. Rather than suffer inner feelings of failure, the people, in general, would rather work for personal success, each on his "wild lone," than to effect the coordinations which would make life richer in the jobs where most of them will have to stay.

Life in the Republic, in other words, is in considerable part, an economic-social climber's race against ever-increasing handicaps. Continually the struggle deepens the social stratifications and breeds new psychological groups which I shall call "attitude classes." And tomorrow's article will be about how they don't make our major coordination projects any easier.

'Frills' in Defense Homes Roil House Committee Members

Criticism of refrigerators and "other frills" in Government-planned homes for defense workers was voiced yesterday by members of the House Rules Committee, who postponed action for the second day on a bill to double the existing $150,000,000 authorization for defense housing.

Several committee members complained that the Government is providing free "luxuries" in its defense housing projects which "well-paid defense workers" could afford to buy themselves.

"Why not cut out all these frills?" asked Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan.

"If there is anything in the law that permits any luxury or extravagance, I haven't heard of it," replied Charles Palmer, defense housing coordinator.

The defense housing law of 1940, whose cost limitations would be continued under the pending bill, provides that the average cost of dwellings built under the act cannot exceed $3,000, while no single housing unit can exceed $3,950.

Federal Works Administrator Carmody told the committee the Government is having "very great difficulty" in holding costs down to the $3,000 average in the face of rising prices of lumber and other construction materials and what he called excessive valuations placed on land in some communities. He stated that the Navy Department had purchased land for $500 an acre in one Texas town a few weeks before the owners were asking $1,932 an acre when the land was required for defense housing.

When Michener asked Carmody if he found it difficult to carry out "a social purpose" in some of the agencies under his administration and at the same time do "a business-like emergency job" in defense housing Carmody replied heatedly:

"You're questioning my choice as administrator for this job.

"I've been on the management side all my life," Carmody said. "I have no difficulty in carrying out the provisions of any law that governs my responsibility."

Treasury Employes Being Double-Checked

Treasury Department employes are having their characters and backgrounds checked and double-checked by Internal Revenue investigators. Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau ordered the inquiry covering thousands of his employes as a precaution against possible sabotage and fifth column work. Most of the employes appointed at Treasury since Morgenthau has been secretary have been investigated before they started to work, but hundreds of employes paid from emergency funds and many others appointed prior to 1933 were never subjected to character investigations. Morgenthau simply wanted to make certain that all Treasury employes are checked and approved by the crack Intelligence Unit headed by Elmer Irey.

Though the inquiry is far from complete, it was learned that no veteran Treasury employe has been removed on the basis of information unearthed by the revenue agents. However, several new employes who were appointed subject to character investigations have been quietly released. The handful of employes was suspected of either Communist or Nazi connections.

War Department has hired between 600 and 700 civilian medical technicians during the past six months. Through the Red Cross it is building up a reserve of technicians so the Army will be "prepared for any future eventuality." Technicians have been recruited by Civil Service but when the merit lists are exhausted they will be hired from Red Cross rolls. On February 1 there were 2,072 on the Red Cross reserve list. These include dieticians, x-ray technicians, dental mechanics, laboratory technicians and the like.

James L. Houghteling, who was chief of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization Service until it was shifted to Justice from Labor, has been given a job in the Alcohol Tax Unit. He will work with local and Army authorities to see that liquor is kept under control near Army cantonments.

Lack of Influence?

You'd think that the administrative assistants to President Roosevelt would be loaded down with influence. Perhaps they are, to the minds of most people, but not to the State Department messengers. It's a fact that urgent mail for the administrative assistants has been delayed up to ten days in the State Department mail room. The President's aides have offices in the State Building, but State officials and messengers have refused to deliver mail to their offices promptly on the ground that there is no appropriation for the work.

Theodore Wilson has been offered the job of personnel director at the Treasury Department, but he's studying the offer closely after what happened to E. R. Ballinger. He's personnel director at Farm Credit, the breeding ground of personnel experts. . . . Effective tomorrow, the following employes will be retired at Government Printing Office: Frank Addison, Francis Beach, John H. Fox, Mrs. Kate McLaughlin, William F. Micott and Charles Thomas. Society of Federal Translators will meet Monday night at the Y. W. C. A.

An open examination for male typists likely will be announced soon by the Civil Service Commission. An open test for male stenographers was announced several weeks ago. Hundreds of male stenographers and typists have been hired at the War Department . . . the register for the recent card-punch exam has been delayed again. Grades of the participants won't be sent out before March 15 . . . Civil Service exams: Construction superintendent, various grades with salaries ranging from $3,200 to $5,600. Applications will be accepted until the end of the year but qualified men are urged to apply at once. Lithographic pressman, various grades with salaries ranging from $1,440 to $2,000, and mobile laundry operator, salaries range from $2,000 to $2,900.

General Accounting Office will nick your expense account if you buy a one-way railroad fare when a round-trip ticket is cheaper. The difference will be deducted. Officers of the colored interdepartmental recreation council organized last night: Herbert Jones, president; Wilbert Johnson, vice president; J. H. Winkley, financial secretary; Mrs. Leslie Miner, recording secretary, and John D. Fletcher, treasurer.

Well, that's okay, the Weather Bureau announced yesterday. But please, girls, for the sake of science, return the recording transmitters to the Government.

Uncle Sam Favors Beauty Over Brains, They Charge

The working girl in Washington who devotes four years of her leisure time to the study of law makes the sacrifice to increase her earning power with Uncle Sam, but few of them expect to succeed.

Of the 23 women who yesterday were announced as having passed the District bar examinations, 12 were reached by The Post last night. Without exception, they were driven to four hard years of study by the same motive—better jobs in the Government.

And almost without exception, they held little hope for advancement, making against Uncle Sam the same general charge that:

"The Federal Government has very little use for a woman with brains. Women in the Federal service are not classified by training. If they advance, likely as not it is because they have looks, not brains. It's the price they pay for being women."

Market Is Glutted

The prospect, they said, for women in private law practice is even gloomier. The Washington market for both men and women lawyers, they declared, is glutted.

In many cases the aspiring Portias were pretty, and at least one of them won a beautiy contest. She is Marion L. Goshorn, 5342 Forty-first Street Northwest, who last year was voted the "sweetheart" of the Washington College of Law. She is a secretary at the Federal Reserve Board, and hopes to get a job where she can use her law.

Gertrude Leibson, 25, of 1321 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, a stenographer in the legal division of the Securities and Exchange Commission, declared that the chances for Government promotion are better if you are graduated from one of the country's big-name law schools. Asked what she hoped to get for her work, she said:

"Nothing much."

Would Consider Marriage

Ruth C. Laubinger, 27, a stenographer in the Department of Justice, condemnation section, is helping her brother, Kurt Laubinger, maintain a home and two children at 409 Seward Square Southeast. A native of Washington, she was graduated from Eastern High School and "hopes" to get her degree in June from Washington College of Law.

While also gloomy about her chances for reward for her work, Marion Davies, 26, of 1633 Sixteenth Street Northwest, said her study was an outgrowth of exposure to law when she worked in an attorney's office while in high school. She said she would consider marriage, if it comes, as a career in itself.

Sara R. Lerch, 1526 Seventeenth Street Northwest, who won A. B. and A. M. degrees before studying law, said that the only way to succeed is to acquire more and more learning. She admitted, however, "that it doesn't always work."

U. S. Worker for 22 Years

A Government employe for 22 years, Miss Lerch now holds a responsible position in the Bureau of Customs.

Dorothy M. Weber, 1405 Harvard Street Northwest, is secretary to Richard A. Walsh, chief of the bankruptcy unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Yesterday's list of successful bar candidates carried both their names.

Also on the list were Mary E. Aldrich, 3624 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, and Irene G. Kolin, 26, of 1727 R Street Northwest. Both studied law in the hope of winning promotion. Miss Aldrich works at the Social Security Board as an adjudicator. Miss Kolin is a clerk in the personnel section of the Soil Conservation Service.

Mrs. Helen M. Cuthbertson, 736 Twenty-second Street Northwest, would like to practice law but she doesn't think there is much chance. She expects to stay in the Government service, but she may enter politics. Once secretary to the late Undersecretary of State Robert E. Olds, one of the architects of the Kellogg peace pacts, Mrs. Cuthbertson said she felt that by passing the bar she had "achieved a goal whether is amounts to anything or not."

Miss Nina Basnight Lupton, 28, of 1814 North Capitol Street, a Treasury employe, went to law classes at Southeastern University at 6:45 in the morning and again after work in the evening. She did it for four years. Her mother, it was explained, wanted a lawyer in her family of two sons and two daughters.

D. C. Services Mark Opening Of Lent

Thousands of Washingtonians—more than in any previous year—yesterday joined in services in Catholic and Protestant churches commemorating the beginning of Lent.

The need for a return to the way of the Nazarene at a time of world chaos and wholesale bloodshed was stressed in nearly all the services.

Bishop James Freeman, of the Washington Cathedral, last night told a confirmation group at Emanuel Episcopal Church, Thirteenth and V Streets Southeast, that "If we are to restore in the youth of our Nation their impaired confidence in our institutions, we must recover the way of life given to Mankind by the Nazarene."

Speaking in the opening service of the church's Lenten program, Bishop Freeman declared that "we have the conceit that with our vast resources in wealth, men and mechanism, we can meet any emergency that may arise.

Cathedral Dean Speaks

Following this noon service, other services were held in Epiphany by the Federation of Churches, in which the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral, asked for maintenance of Christian unity "in the face of the present world emergency."

Services there, at the cathedral, in the Catholic churches and union services at All Souls' Episcopal Church were all attended by congregations as large or larger than any previous Lenten services.

Southeast worshipers began their daily series of Lenten noonday services at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, with Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich speaking on the need for increased spirituality in the youth of the Nation. The Southeast Interchurch Council is sponsoring the series.

Ash Wednesday Services

Catholics opened their 40-day period of penitence and self denial with Ash Wednesday rituals.

Lutherans worshiped at Ash Wednesday services last night in Grace Lutheran Church, with Pastor Gerhard E. Lenski speaking on "The Challenging Christ."

Protestant congregations heard Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, former chancellor of American University, speak at joint services in All Souls' Episcopal Church at Chevy Chase Circle.

Lenten services will begin tonight in the Brookland Methodist Church as the Brookland Lenten Institute sponsors three study groups after a supper at 6 p. m.

Accidents May Part Drivers And Licenses

Motorists convicted of offenses contributing to or directly causing accidents must, in the future, face the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits to show cause why their driving privileges should not be suspended, it was learned last night.

In a move to curb the mounting number of mishaps, the new policy was adopted by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic at the suggestion of Inspector Arthur E. Miller, chief of the police accident prevention unit.

Under present procedure, convictions of reckless or drunken driving are automatically referred to the board. The new policy will include such infractions as driving on the wrong side of the street, failing to yield the right-of-way, turning from a wrong lane, etc.—providing the offender is involved in an accident.

Some 20 cases of this type are now pending before the revocation board, which meets today.

The length of permit suspensions will be left to discretion of the board if, in its opinion, the offender caused or contributed to an accident, it was announced. Only cases in which traffic court convictions are returned will be sent to the board for review.

Special forms for reporting accidents in which traffic violations are involved have been provided police. These, in turn, will be sent to police headquarters and then to the revocation board if and when accused drivers are convicted in court.

Beginning today, all motorists convicted of first offense speed violations in excess of 45 miles an hour must also face the board. A special order of the Commissioners, providing maximum permit suspensions of 90 days for first offenses of this type, becomes effective at 8 a. m.

Under this same order, second offenders convicted of speeds in excess of 45 miles face loss of their permits for a maximum of six months.

He will serve as executive officer aboard the munitions ship Pyro, with grade of lieutenant, junior grade.

Navy Asks $1,000,000 Office Unit

Plans Call for New Temporary Building To Be Erected In Potomac Park

The Navy has asked funds for the construction of a $1,000,000 building in West Potomac Park to house its overflowing bureaus.

Plans for the structure, now before the Bureau of the Budget, call for the erection of two-story connected office units behind the Navy and Munitions Buildings, running alongside the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool.

Under the project, the present parking lot behind the War and Navy Departments will be eliminated and a 60-foot wide building put up there, more than three blocks long.

The building would be of temporary wooden construction, without foundations, and would occupy most of the space between the existing departmental structure and the reflecting pool fence.

One problem presented in connection with the project, which is receiving study at the Budget Bureau, is the effect on parking facilities in the area. One suggestion advanced is that space be made available for cars of employes of the War and Navy Departments in the park area south of reflecting pool.

Whether funds for the building can be obtained from public works money already appropriated, or whether Congress must vote the money, has not been worked out.

Vehicle Bureau Will Photograph Revenue Coupons

To insure quick and accurate checks of revenue received from auto tag, inspection and tax fees, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic today will inaugurate a system of keeping photographic records of all collection coupons.

A special machine has been installed at the department and will make permanent photographic records of all collection receipts. Under the supervision of George Kidwell, chief field examiner of the District Auditor's office, daily audits will be made from the reproductions.

The machine was authorized by the Commissioners after shortages in accounts were recently uncovered at the traffic department. As fast as they are received and stamped by clerks, collection coupons will be dropped into the apparatus, which automatically photographs and develops.

A second machine—a type of projector—will show an enlargement of the coupons on a glass screen for checking by auditors.

Chevy Chase Baptists Enjoy Play, Ghost Tales

More than 150 members of the Chevy Chase Baptist Church last night sang, viewed melodramas and skits and listened to ghost stories at the church's annual all-member social evening honoring new members.

A variety program, in which each of 12 organizations contributed one feature, was preceded by greetings from the pastor, the Rev. Edward O. Clark. It was followed by refreshments.

In charge of the program, held in the basement of the Chevy Chase church, was L. J. Outlaw. High lights of the entertainment program were stories told by Miss Ira B. Trice, community singing led by the choir, readings and a play depicting the 60-year history of the Christian Endeavor movement.

Police Called Out To Quell Selects

Police were called out last night to quell a disturbance at Local Selective Service Board No. 15, 616 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, where upward of two score of selectees were attempting to beat a classification deadline.

About 10 of the registrants, whose questionnaires had been ordered answered not later than today, pushed inside a railing where board members were assisting men to fill out the forms by turn. They refused to return to their proper places so Fifth Precinct patrolmen were called to restore order.

Proving the Modern Dance Has Charm

THE RHYTHM WAS PRIMITIVE—Charm and grace of the modern dance was exhibited last night at the annual feature night program by George Washington University's Department of Physical Education for Women in the college gymnasium. Zelda Seidel and Doris Sosnick beat out a primitive rhythm on the tom-toms as Betty Egloff, Roslyn Lambiase and Jane Thompson (left to right, at top) danced. More than 150 parents and boy friends viewed the coed's demonstrations of figure-building dances

Sen. McCarran To Fight D. C. Tax Change

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday declared he will oppose the House amendment to the District income tax scheduled to be submitted to the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee today.

McCarran, who fought the District income tax before its enactment, said the amendment would work an injustice on Nevadans residing in Washington. Nevada has no income tax, he explained, and consequently Nevadans here would be subject to the District levy.

Under the amendment requested by Chairman Hunter, of the House subcommittee, all District residents who could show proof of paying an income tax to their State of legal residence would be exempt from the District tax.

"I am going to fight the amendment with all the power I can summon," said Senator McCarran, who is a member of the Senate Subcommittee on District Taxation.

"There is no reason why the people of Nevada should be penalized in the District just because their State is run so well they don't have to have an income tax," he added.

"The income tax will never work equitably in the District. Just as soon as you amend it to get away from double taxation you step into the realm of discrimination. I am opposed to the whole District income tax. It ought to be repealed."

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech will submit the amendment to the House subcommittee this morning. Some testimony is expected to be offered by representatives of the tax divisions of Maryland and Virginia.

Special Series Is Opened By Symphony

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloists: Emerson Meyers, piano; Howard Mitchell, violoncello. Program: Quartet in G minor for piano and string (Mozart), "Trafic" (Eppert), "Mirage" (Shapleigh), "The Lotus Eaters" (Potter), "The Flax Spinner" (Shure), "Schelomo:" Hebrew rhapsody for violoncello and orchestra (Bloch), Second and fourth movements from "Symphonie Fantastique" (Berlioz).

Conducting the National Symphony Orchestra last evening in the first concert of the special series, Hans Kindler presented a program stimulating to the imagination of the auditors. Although Mozart's piano quartet in G minor does not fall in the category of descriptive music, it so abounds in melodic beauties as to quicken the poetic fancy to visions of ethereal loveliness. Expanded to the sonority of a concerto by utilizing three string choirs of the orchestra, it assumed richer hues which enhanced its poesy. Emerson Meyers read the piano part with insight and clarity, and the familiar work made a most pleasurable introduction to the novelties that immediately followed.

BROWN

From that point on, the concert became an exposition of avowed program music, each composition unfolding a pictorial idea, and there was reason for pride in the fact that five of the six composers represented are American: Carl Eppert, Bertram Shapleigh, Edward C. Potter, Dean Shure and Ernest Bloch. Moreover, the Washington Composers' Club claims three of them as present and past members.

Carl Eppert, native of Indiana and resident of Milwaukee, led the way with his "Traffic," an impressionistic tone poem which some of us remember having heard when it was first broadcast nearly nine years ago as a prize-winning work. The music bears out its title as a description of metropolitan din. After a quiet opening, suggestive of the quietude at dawn, it rises to climaxes too realistic for comfort.

"Mirage," by the late Bertram Shapleigh, is a remarkable and beautifully scored poem, evocative of a dream world. An unobtrusive touch of Oriental modes in the harmony suggests the desert of Arabia, but the mirage may be an illusion of any clime or time. The tonal coloring is subtly applied, and even in the fortissimo passages of ecstatic vision the economy of instrumentation is admirable. The work impresses one as the product of a highly gifted musician.

The late Edward C. Potter, composer of "The Lotus Eaters," turned to music as a avocation after an active participation in so unmusical a profession as metallurgical engineering. In this tone poem, written for purposes of choreography by Lisa Gardiner, he expresed that happy state of indolence attained only in lands of fable.

Dean Shure, who succeeded Mr. Potter as president of the composers' club, was present last night to hear his symphonic vignette, "The Flax Spinner." In this deftly scored piece, he has drawn upon memories of his visit to Palestine six years ago.

Howard Mitchell, first violoncellist of the orchestra, gave eloquent projection to the solo part of Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo." He completely caught the plaintive quality of the soliloquy in which King Solomon in all his glory reflects upon his triumphs and his failures. The emotional burden of this extraordinary rhapsody is the utterance of Koheleth: "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity." The composer once told me that he had first planned this work as a chorus expressing precisely that idea.

Busy Weekend Of Blood Bank Fetes Planned

The American Legion, co-sponsor of the Children's Hospital blood bank campaign, is heading into a busy weekend.

Several posts and auxiliaries will hold benefit parties, while a number of others are taking up collections among their members to help maintain the hospital's transfusion and sreum service for another year.

Jane A. Delano Post, composed of World War Nurses, yesterday announced it had voted a $10 donation. Miss Martha Stewart is post commander.

Department of Agriculture Post revealed that it is collecting money for the fund and at the same time organizing a blood donor squad. Commander of this Legion group is Raymond R. Smith.

Three American Legion parties are scheduled for tomorrow night and the same number for Saturday.

In the first group are Stephen P. McGroarty Post, whose game party benefit will be in the K. of C. Hall, 3327 North Washington Boulevard, Clarendon, Va.; Sergt. Jasper Post and Auxiliary Unit, card party, 1407 Webster Street Northwest, and Government Printing Office Post, which will stage a motion picture party in Harding Hall, atop the GPO building.

Also scheduled for tomorrow night is the dance to be given in the Colonial Village Community House, under direction of Jacob Blake and Mrs. George E. Youngblood.

The Saturday Legion program includes a repeat performance of the GPO movie night and two card parties, one by Washington Police and Fire Post and Auxiliary Unit, in Odd Fellows Hall, and the other by Bunker Hill Post, at its 807 Monroe Street Northeast clubrooms.

Pennybacker Rites To Be Held Today

Services will be held today in White Plains, N. Y., for James Edmund Pennybacker, 65, former Bureau of Public Roads official and managing director of the Asphalt Institute, who died Tuesday at Delray Beach, Fla.

A native of Franklin, W. Va., Mr. Pennybacker attended the University of West Virginia and won his law degree at Georgetown University, and spent his career in highway projects. From 1906 to 1910 he served as chief of economics with Bureau of Public Roads, and from 1914 to 1917 as its chief of managements. He was a member of the Cosmos Club here.

Contract Bridge

Here are two examples of the suit-preference signal in action:

West	East
♠ 4	♠ 965
♡ Q 8 7 5 3 2	♡ None
◇ A 10 7 2	◇ J 6 3
♣ Q 4	♣ K 10 9 8 7 3 2

South is the declarer at four spades. North has bid hearts which together with West's heart holding suggests that East may be void. But even if the plan works, West must tell East how to put him in the lead again for a second ruff. Spades are trumps; hearts is the suit led; therefore, diamonds and clubs are the "plain" suits. A high heart would ask for a diamond return; a low heart would call for a club.

West leads the heart eight, an unnecessarily high heart. East trumps and plays back a low diamond. West takes the ace over declarer's honor and a second heart lead is trumped by East. The jack of diamonds or a club comes in later for the setting trick.

In the next hand the defender uses the suit-preference signal in discarding. The cards:

West	East
♠ 9 8 3	♠ K 6 2
♡ 5 4	♡ 9 7 3
◇ A Q 6 2	◇ K 8 4
♣ 10 7 6 5	♣ Q 8 4 3

South is the declarer at four hearts; North has bid spades. West opens a trump which declarer takes, drawing two more rounds, giving West a chance to discard. Hearts are trumps and the spade suit was opened; therefore, when west throws off the spade nine he tells his partner to lead a diamond when and if he gains the lead. A low spade discard would ask for a club lead.

Declarer finesses the spades, loses to East's king, and East has no trouble in deciding what suit to return. The defense wins three diamonds and a spade to defeat the hand. Without the preference signal, East would have been put to a guess.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

There are some people who figure they wouldn't bother to fight for Guam or Samoa just to improve the breed of postage stamps.

I can't describe it, but it's more than that. A nation is like a spelling bee. It only wins when the others miss.

Out in the Pacific we own Hawaiian Islands, Guam, Samoa, Midway, Wake and the Philippines. That's a long ways off and so is a giraffe's kisser. But you don't have to hit a giraffe on the chin to knock it out.

There are islands in the Atlantic much more dangerous than Guam and Samoa. And like Cato the younger with his sustaining feature, "Carthage must fall," I'm going to keep saying you don't own your home if another man owns the doorsteps.

Say, Bermuda is so close that a flea could hop it if it took off while the dog was running.

Keep False Teeth Purified Says Dr. Sherwin

Don't brush your false teeth or dental plates—you can't purify them that way—you can't even clean them properly that way.

Keep up with the times—get today a generous 30 cent bottle of Stera-Kleen—give your plate a bath as directed, and after the first bath your false teeth will start to sparkle with purity and cleanliness—will so glisten with beauty that you'll be proud of them. Your mouth will feel much better—rejuvenated.

Just a little of Stera-Kleen in a half glass of water and all slimy mucin stains and murkiness begin to go—it's amazing—lasts for weeks—30 cents—all drug stores.

Jury Told How Messenger Boy Died UnderCar

The death of George F. Leigh, 17-year-old messenger, under the wheels of an automobile last November 20, was described by a dozen witnesses to a jury before Justice James W. Morris in the District Court yesterday.

Charged with manslaughter was Riley Johnson, 32, colored, alleged driver of the automobile which killed Leigh and severely injured Ralph Padgett, 15, of 14 Seventh Street Southeast. Paralyzed from the waist dows, Padgett is still in a hospital.

Under questioning by Assistant District Attorney Maurice F. McInerny, Government witnesses told the jurors that the two boys were talking at the curb of Eleventh Street, near I Street Southeast, the night of last November 20.

The car alleged to have been driven by Johnson came down the street about 60 miles an hour, witnesses said, passed another automobile on the wrong side and crashed into the boys. The witnesses said Johnson appeared to be intoxicated.

Johnson, who was defended by R. B. Washington and Karl F. von Klatt, testified that he was not drunk and was driving only about 20 miles an hour. He said the victims came down I Street into his path and cut back to the curb, but not in time to avoid the accident.

The case is expected to reach the jury this afternoon.

Maj. Gen. Winn, Who Won Medals, Is Dead

The War Department yesterday received notification of the death of Maj. Gen. Frank L. Winn, United States Army, retired, on February 24, at Palo Alto, Calif.

Gen. Winn was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for "military attainments of a high order" as commander of the 177th Infantry Brigade and Eighty-ninth Division in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

He also earned two silver-bar citations for gallantry in action against Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, and against insurgent forces in the Philippines; the French Croix de Guerre, with two palms, and the French Legion of Honor (Commander).

Born in Warrenton, Va., in 1847, he was brought here the same year and remained a resident of the District throughout his lifetime. He was present at the laying of the cornerstone of the Washington Monument. For 33 years he was an employe of the Globe Printing Co., while it was engaged in printing the Congressional Record. Subsequently he was an employe of the public schools until retired at the age of 74.

MR. GEORGE

He was the father of the late Judge Albert George, of Chicago, and is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Frances Raymond, Miss Emma George, Mrs. Harietta Stewart, Mrs. Cornelia Shorter and Mrs. Neenah Payne. Also surviving are 11 grandchildren and 8 great grandchildren.

John Mullineaux's Funeral Held

The funeral of John Thomas Mullineaux, 74, retired farmer and lifelong resident of Damascus (Md.) neighborhood, who died of a heart attack at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Russell King, of Clarksburg, Md., where he was visiting, took place yesterday afternoon from the home near Damascus.

Norway Is Still InWar, Friends Here Are Told

Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway and more than 200 friends of their nation gathered at the Shoreham Hotel last night to hear the president of the Norwegian Parliament, J. C. Hambro, declare that "Norway is at war."

The evening's program, concluded with a dance, was under the auspices of the Norwegian Society of Washington.

Standing between the flags of Norway and the United States, O. P. Solem, president of the society, introduced the royal couple as "the future King and Queen of Norway."

Hambro told the gathering, "We should look on this war not just as the war of England against Germany, but as the war of England, Norway, Belgium, Holland and Czechoslovakia against Germany.

"We must bear in mind that this is a war of democratic ideals against Nazi Germany."

He emphasized that the Norwegian government remains active in London today. Norway's merchant fleet of between 1,400 and 1,500 ships is supplying funds for the government, he said.

Jacobs Plans Galento-Buddy Baer Fight Here

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26.—The model behavior of the young gentlemen in the Nats' camp is slowly killing the corps of correspondents who have had nothing more exciting to report than the gradual reduction of Dutch Leonard's waistline.

POVICH

There isn't a braggart, a confirmed drunk or a showboat in the lot. They're all businessmen ball players, as circumspect and unnaughty a group as ever was collected on one squad. The most scandalous thing that has happened thus far occurred today when one of the young men spit on the sidewalk.

Rookies and veterans alike on the Washington roster this year seem to have come out of the same mold—earnest, diligent young men whom Buck Newsom could never understand. The 11:30 curfew here is as inviolate as a Supreme Court decision and, in fact, it's superfluous. All of the little darlings have usually tucked themselves in their trundle beds long before.

Newsom, too, used to turn in at 11:30, with a nod to Manager Stanley Harris as he passed through the lobby at that hour, but at 11:40, Buck was usually negotiating a back stairway for a few more hours of night life. But his late hours never seemed to bother Newsom. He'd bounce out to the park at the appointed hour the next day and shame the goody-goodies with the zest and ferocity of his workout.

Newsom was always a source of exciting copy, whether he was trying to prove he could drive his new car 70 miles an hour in second gear, or betting that he could win more games than Feller and Ruffing combined. Buck set a new high for something or other when, in one interview here, he called Jimmy Foxx "a semi-pro who can be pitched to, if you know how."

A Cliff Bolton would do wonders for the humdrum state of affairs at this camp. At least, the correspondents could report whether Bolton did or did not show up for practice. Either way it was an even bet. Bolton provided copy for days on one occasion when, en route to practice on the team's bus, he suddenly pulled the stop cord half way to the park, climbed off the bus and next was heard from at his home in the North Carolina hills. He had simply decided he didn't want to play baseball any more and didn't think it was quite necessary to tell Manager Harris or Owner Griffith.

Bolton's A. W. O. L. episodes netted him nothing more than a tie with Jake Powell in the contributions to camp life on the Washington team, however. Powell's evening began at midnight, but he was back in his bed before dawn merged with the sun. But not much before. Jake was never one who was much on schedules. The day the Nats broke camp at Orlando a few years ago for the barnstorming trip North, Jake sort of neglected to go along with the team. Just absent minded.

The Nats were scheduled to play an exhibition game in Cordele, Ga., the next afternoon after a 12-hour train ride, but don't think Jake missed the game. No indeed. There was nothing that wasn't big-leaguish about Jake. Not far from the Cordele ball park a half hour before the game was to start, an airplane came swooping down out of the skies with a lone passenger. It was Jake. He had chartered the plane from Orlando, at a cost of nearly a month's salary.

There isn't even an amateur magician or a practical joker on the Washington squad. At least Joe Kuhel used to make the rookies goggle-eyed with his black magic routine and his deftness with the cards. And Johnny Salveson, the big pitcher from the Coast who couldn't get a batter out with a time bomb, had at least one saving grace. Salveson was the camp cut-up. He bought up every explosive gadget in the Orlando novelty stores and set a new high for brashness when he calmly handed Manager Harris a cigarette that popped. When Harris, indignant for the moment, began telling the rookie off, Salveson said he was sorry. "No hard feelings, I hope," said the rookie as he extended his hand to the manager. Harris took the hand, and got the shock of the concealed buzzer it held. The trip back to Washington ended for Salveson at Chattanooga.

Nameless shall be the ingenious Washington outfielder who finally solved the intricacies of the quarter slot machine in the Nats' hotel at Biloxi after several weeks of trying to beat it the accepted way. The diabolical machine wouldn't spew the jackpot and its hungry maw had taken nearly $100 in the outfielder's quarters. Finally one night the fellow hit it—over the head with a baseball bat—and got all his quarters back, and more. It was not considered a crime.

These are just a few of the things we thought that you might want to know are not happening in the Nats' 1941 baseball camp where a dropping pin falls with a thud.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 26.—Believe it or not, sometimes it is tough. You sit in front of your portable and you light the cigarettes and you scratch. And you clean your nails and you read the afternoon papers again. And maybe you have a shot, or get up and throw some cold water in your face. And still your brain, if you've got one, lies there like a plate of cold lima beans. And if there is a thought in that loathesome stew it goes something like this:

CONSIDINE

"The bombs are dropping . . . the world's going mad again . . . the same old idiocy is leading us to the customary blood-letting . . . and here you sit trying to steam up something important-sounding about the creak in Lefty Gomez's arm."

Well (you say), this is the night you can't write it. The futility of flexing muscles, or throwing a fist, or horses' hooves, or the hissing song of skates on ice hits you pretty hard. You think of the notes your mother used to send to Sister Julia, of St. Joseph, alibiing for you when you couldn't do the long division. "Robert was very sick last night." You think of the people who say, "Geez, what a soft racket you've got, getting in to see all those sports events for nothing." But sometimes it's tough.

"Schnoz" was a reminder to say something cutting about the way the Cincinnati Reds are tossing that big lunk of a catcher around. They handed Lombardi the usual ultimatum about their looking around for a seasoned catcher to take his place. They said, "we have a lot of confidence in Dick West, too." West is a rookie, who can't carry Schnoz's mask to the plate. That's corny stuff, and Lombardi's a fool if he falls for it.

The Reds cleared three hundred and some thousand dollars in 1939 and only a little less last year. They cut Lombardi's salary $6,000 a few years ago and never made it up. They offered him a $1,000 raise for 1941. He wants at least his old dough back and he rates it off his years of service. The guy couldn't outrun your kid, but he's a good receiver, about the best hitter in the league, and we think the Reds are crummy for trying to sandbag him into line.

"Anthony" meant Anthony D'Ambrosia He's Lou Ambers' kid, but Lou has shown nice taste in his current comeback by not "owing it all" to the little fellow, who, like most fighters' kids, wouldn't give a hoot if the old man fought Louis or just boxed a compass. Ambers is coming back because he wants the money and because he knows he has a few good fights in him. He looked terrible in the gym while training for tomorrow night's fight against Lew Jenkins. But he always looked terrible in the gym.

He looks you in the eye when you talk to him, and he tells you he'll win. There's no vanity in his voice. No whistling-in-the-graveyard. Just "I'll win." And, though you don't think he will, you listen to him gravely. Because he has a way of licking his conquerors in return matches. He did it to Tony Canzoneri, to Pedro Montanez and to Henry Armstrong. And he can't see how Jenkins—who beat him partly on the strength of a couple of sneak punches after the second round-bell—will be any different.

"Canadiens" was a reminder that they play the Rangers tomorrow night at the Garden. Slowly, but pretty surely, they're recapturing the glamour that once attached itself to the club's name . . . which is Club de Hockey Canadien incidentally. In bygone days they had about everything, and everybody. For instance Didier Pitre, the speed of whose puck was supposed to crack sideboards. And Jack Laviolette, who could skate backwards as fast and as gracefully as forward. And Georges Vezina, an all-time goalie, who played 15 years without missing a game, collapsed in a game and died of T. B., and Howie Morenz, Aurel Joliat, Pit Lepine.

They smelled for a long time, but now they're doing pretty good. In fact, ever since they picked up Frank Patrick as business manager and got Dick Irvin from the Maple Leafs as coach and garnered the rookie, Johnny Quilty. Irvin's good. The only reason more hasn't been heard of him is because he was shoved out of the spotlight at Toronto by the club's loud

Strike One on Connie Mack as Five Hurler Hopefuls Look On

Pitching Jobs Abound On Washington Club

Six Jobs Open; Only Three Accredited Hurlers Counted on by Nationals

By Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26.—This Washington training camp is the rookie pitcher's paradise. There are no less than six pitching jobs open on the club, the instruction here is high caliber, and big league salaries are beckoning to the fellows who can pitch a little bit.

Actually, there are only three accredited pitching employes with the Nats—Dutch Leonard, Ken Chase and Sid Hudson. With Bucky Harris prepared to carry a staff of at least nine hurlers, there should be a fine scramble for jobs if the rookies are ambitious.

Thus far, Harris is counting the veteran Danny MacFayden and the upper-case rookies, Walter Masterson and Arnold Anderson, as semi-fixtures, but he is not definitely committed to them. Any other rookie who gives the appearance of being able to get by in the American League will be given the preference.

Anything that a young pitcher doesn't know about throwing a ball, he should be able to learn in the Nats' camp. On the scene every day, giving personal instruction to the lads is Clark Griffith, who was one of the great pitchers of baseball; and Bucky Harris, who is also accepted as something of a pitching authority.

Griff Spots Flaws

Griffith, who had to be a smart pitcher because his own fast ball couldn't shatter a soda cracker, spots the flaws in his young talent with the ease that Einstein recites the multiplication table. The Nats' owner takes the rookies aside, by turn, and tells them how to improve their pitch—he recommends a longer or shorter stride, as the case may be; or a different follow through or wrist action, or one of the dozen other little niceties of the art.

Harris concerns himself more with the rookies' behavior on the rubber and their ability to hold runners close to the bases. He specializes, too, in helping the

Catholic Five Loses Finale ToWashington

By the Associated Press

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 26.—Washington College clinched a place in the Mason-Dixon basketball playoffs here tonight by defeating Catholic University's Cardinals, 39 to 34. It was C. U.'s final game and their twelfth straight defeat.

The Shoremen made a fast start, netting seven points before Catholic U. got going with a shot by Stynes.

Catholic U. then tied the score twice in the first half but Washington pulled out in front to lead 25 to 15 at intermission.

The Cardinals spurted several times in the second half but Samele's timely shots for Washington College broke the rallies.

Samele led the scoring with 20 points and Reidy topped the Cardinals with 9. Gide, substituting for Francis McNiff, Shoremen captain, who has an injured ankle, played a good defensive game at guard.

Nats' Rookie Parade

at Orlando

This is the third in a series of articles dealing with rookies with the Washington Nats at their training camp in Orlando, Fla. Other stories will appear from time to time in The Post.

3. ARNOLD ANDERSON, pitcher.

He's a big, freckle-necked farm lad from James, Iowa, who has been trudging to minor league pitching mounds for four years. He's ready for the big leagues this season—Bucky Harris hopes.

He's the pet of the rookie pitching crop in the Nats' camp, because the Nats' bosses think he is the rookie most likely to succeed. He has a fast ball and he is no green 'pea out there on the mound. He made two starts for Washington last fall. He shut out the A's for four innings and was knocked out of the box in the fifth. He started again against the Browns and beat them with six hits.

He was signed originally by Washington during the summer of 1937, when Uncle Nick Altrock made a special scouting trip to Sioux Falls, S. Dak., to watch him pitch in the Nebraska State League. The Nats brought him up that fall and he proved he wasn't ready when the White Sox beat him without much trouble.

He spent the '38 season with Charlotte and the '39 season with Springfield, and startled nobody with his pitching. But suddenly toward the end of last season he was a consistent winner at Springfield and the Nats brought him back. Of the 23 games he started at Springfield, he finished 21, which was one of the things the Nats liked about him.

He was a star on his high school team at Lawton, S. Dak., and was the team's catcher when he wasn't pitching. He's 26 years old, 6 feet, 4 inches tall, 205 pounds, and the biggest man on the Washington squad. He knows his way around a farm, he says, particularly a stock farm. He says also that he was the leading hitter on the Washington Club last season, and points to his .500 batting average, compiled when he made three hits in the five times he went to bat for the Nats in 1940.

Baseball Reports:

Greenberg Gives Up Idea Of Deferment

By International News Service

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Hank Greenberg, heavy-hitting outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, said in Chicago today he had given up any idea of asking deferment in the draft and was ready to join the military service as soon as called which he expected would be in July. He said:

"I'm in class one, ready to be called and I'll go when they call me."

His draft board in Detroit said Greenberg had suggested in his questionnaire that he be placed in class two which would give him a six-month deferment and thus not force him to be out part of two playing seasons. Greenberg now apparently has made up his mind not to press this suggestion.

"I just didn't want to break into two baseball seasons," Greenberg said. "I hoped they might see fit to grant me deferment until the end of the 1941 season. But I'm ready to go any time they call me."

He was asked if he planned to enlist at once so that he would be out only this season, and not part of next season also. He replied with a laugh:

"I'll go when they collar me."

Sturm Pleases Yanks

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 26 (AP).—The New York Yankees' workout was lifted out of the day-to-day routine today by the fact that player, and spectators alike realized Johnny Sturm, up from Kansas City, will be the American Leaguers' regular first baseman unless he shows he can't hold the job.

Sturm, moved up a notch through the sale of Babe Dahlgren to the Boston Bees, was the center of attraction throughout today's session. Bill Dickey accepted terms, Joe McCarthy announced.

Owen Cables Dodgers

Havana, Feb. 26 (AP).—The "very wide" differences which two weeks ago existed between Brooklyn Dodger President Larry MacPhail and Brooklyn Dodger Catcher Arnold (Mickey) Owen will be threshed out on Cuban soil, perhaps this weekend.

Secretary John McDonald announced today that Owen had cabled MacPhail he was on his way to Havana. There is a chance the former St. Louis Cardinal backstop will arrive Friday, the same day Catcher Babe Phelps is due in town.

Manager Leo Durocher sent the squad through its longest workout to date, ordering a four-inning game in which the regulars scored an easy 6-1 victory. Ed Head and Hugh Casey pitched one-hit ball while the regulars got five of their

Bimelech's Future Hinges on Showing In $50,000 Race

By the United Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 26.—Whether Bimelech, Col. E. R. Bradley's candidate for the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup race at Hialeah Park Saturday, will continue to campaign or be retired to stud depeds upon his showing in the mile-and-a-quarter feature, it was learned today.

Bradley, recuperating at his North Lake Trail home here following recent illness, said he would talk with William Hurley, Bimelech's trainer, after Saturday's, race, and if the horse shows fine form or wins the event, he may run again.

Bimelech galloped the Widener distance today in 2:10. The 4-year-old son of Black Toney—La Troienne made his 1941 debut at Hialeah last Saturday when he won the $2,500 Eastern Air Lines purse, to bring his total earnings to $246,745.

Hershey Professional Has Out Nine of 30; Guldahl, Snead, Hogan, Harbert Have 67

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 26.—Henry Picard, the golfing stylist from Hershey, Pa., led a wholesale assault on par in the $5,000 St. Petersburg Open today with a first round 66.

Altogether, 35 golfers gave par 71 a shellacking, but a great nine-hole stretch of 30 earned Picard a 1-stroke margin.

Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago; Chick Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich.; Ben Hogan and Sam Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., all cracked out 67's.

Jimmy Turnesa, of New York; Herman Barron, of White Plains, N. Y., and Clarence Doser, of Sarasota, Fla., scored 68's and there was a nine-way tie at 69.

Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., winner of the Thomasville Open last week, remained in a contending position at the 69 spot, which he shared with Ted Turner, of Clementon, N. J.; Leland Gibson, of Kansas City; Henry Bontempo, of Springfield, Mass.; E. J. Harrison, of Chicago; Stanley Horne, of Montreal; Terl Johnson, of Norristown, Pa.; Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, and an amateur, Mel Demaris, of Haverhill, Mass.

No less than 18 others, including National Open Champion Byron Nelson, of Toledo, and Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex., winner here last year, shot 70's, and pars were a dime a dozen.

Picard Out in 30

Picard, who will switch his affiliation to Oklahoma City April 1, made the story, however, by clipping five strokes off par in four consecutive holes. Included in that splurge was an eagle 3 on the fifth,

'King of the Texas Rangers,' Starrin' Slingin' Sam Baugh

Sammy Baugh gets in the groove at Republic Studios with Judy Canova. An All-Texas cast will make the serial

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Feb. 26.—Slingin' Sammy Baugh, of football fame, signed a movie contract today.

Rated one of the greatest pass-tossing artists in the game, Baugh will play the leading role in a serial of his home State entitled, "King of the Texas Rangers."

Baugh was the star of the champion Texas Christian University team during his college days at Fort Worth, then became one of the air-offensive aces of the Washington Redskins professional machine, leading it to the National League title in 1938.

Bout Hinges On Turnout For Conn

New York Promoter To Bring Tony Here If Conn's March 6 Fight Is Successful

By Al Hailey

Tony Galento, beer baron of Orange, N. J., will start his comeback in the boxing business in Washington next month in a 10-round fight with Max Baer's "little" brother, Buddy, if the forthcoming Billy Conn-Danny Hassett battle at Uline's Ice Arena proves a success.

Promoter Mike Jacobs yesterday announced in New York that he was considering putting on the fight in either Philadelphia, Jersey City or Washington, but it was understood that he favored the Capital.

Ray Alvis, who is promoting the Conn-Hassett 15-round fight March 6 with Jacobs, has been trying to persuade Jacobs to bring the match to the Capital March 17. The New York promoter, however, plans to stage the fight March 26.

Wants a Comeback

Galento was a spectator at the recent Joe Louis-Red Burman fight and convinced himself then that Louis has slipped so much that he can knock out the champion.

Badly sliced up in his memorable "battle of bums" with Max Baer, Galento figures to use Maxie's younger brother as a stepping stone to another shot at the heavyweight title.

Buddy, the 6 foot 5½-inch, 245-pound Baer, has proved a slight flop in the fight business, but a victory over him probably would certify Two-Ton Tony for a championship battle.

Jacobs Comes Here

Jacobs, who will come to Washington next week to supervice the installation of the boxing ring in the new $700,000 ice palace, will be a spectator at the Conn-Hassett fight. If the turnout for that fight comes up to his expectations, he will bring in the Galento-Baer battle and probably follow it up with a showing of Louis here in April.

Jacob's decision to promote the fight out of New York came when it was learned that Madison Square Garden will not be available the last week in March.

Meanwhile, Alvis yesterday signed Texas Lee Harper for the ten-round semifinal fight with Chalky Wright on the Conn-Hassett card and was preparing to assist Eddie Walker, Wright's manager, to press his claim for the world's featherweight championship.

Has Title Claim

Wright bases his claim to the title on the fact that neither Petey Scalzo, National Boxing Association champion, nor Harry Jeffra, the New York-Maryland champion, has defended the title within the past six months.

Walker said he would sign two contracts—one for Wright to fight Scalzo and one to fight Jeffra under the promotion of Jacobs and Alvis.

Fred J. Saddy, chairman of the N. B. A. ratings committee, told Alvis by long distance telephone yesterday that he would refer the matter to Joe Triner, president of the N. B. A.

Charles Fenske Sends in Entry for C. U. Indoor Track Meet

Ace to Run In Killion Mile Feature

Wisconsin Star Is First Entry for Race Honoring Lad Killed in Action

University of Wisconsin's fast-stepping miler, Charles Fenske, yesterday filed the first entry for the Edward Lucian Killion Memorial Mile, the feature attraction of Catholic University's Eighth Annual Indoor Track and Field Meet. The event is scheduled for Uline's Arena March 10.

This will mark the first appearance of the great miler for this area, and although his is the first entry received for this event to date, officials expect other stars to enter to make it the finest attraction presented in the eight-year history. The Killion Memorial Mile, replacing the "Maki Mile," will be a perpetual memorial to Edward Killion, Catholic University's first son killed in the last war.

Undefeated in indoor competition last year, Fenske today joins Glenn Cunningham and Leslie MacMitchell, New York University's star, in claiming the best time for the indoor mile. In competition last winter, the bespectacled Wisconsin runner tied Cunningham's mark of 4:07.4 and then last week, MacMitchell hit the same mark in the National A. A. U. event.

Fenske, planning a rest before his appearance here, did not compete in the National A. A. U. event last week. He has suffered heavy colds this winter and is taking a layoff to regain his strength.

In the Boston A. A. event, Fenske placed third, running behind Les MacMitchell and Walter Mehl. He held the same position in the Millrose A. A. Wanamaker Mile, finishing behind the same runners. After leading most of the way, he fell short in the stretch and had to follow Mehl and John Munski, the Missouri star, across the finish line in the Penn A. C. games.

Entries for the annual event will close Saturday, Dorsey J. Griffith, director, announced.

Immigration, Book Section Teams Victors

Two teams failed to hit ten-point totals in D. C. Recreation Department League games last night, Immigration routing Wallace, 26 to 7, and Book Section trouncing Hand Section, 20 to 9.

Naiman Photo led, 21 to 5, at half-time and coasted to a 31 to 12 victory over Calvary Methodist, while in the other one-sided affair Retail Clerks held Sixth Presbyterian to two points at half-time and won, 24 to 14.

Royal Typewriters rallied to overtake Scott's Club, 37 to 34, while Club 40 won, 29 to 21, over Main Press. Scoring was well divided as O. A. S. 1 defeated Shannon & Luchs, 31 to 26, in a low-scoring encounter. Weather Bureau posted an 18 to 17 decision over P. O. Department.

An accurate eye from the foul line helped Mails and Files to a 26-to-22 victory over Washington Loan & Trust.

Ironing Out the Kinks With Bob (Overweight) Feller

Haight Goes Local

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

Ordinarily Turner's Arena and Children's Hospital, located a half block apart on W Street Northwest, have little in common. But that will not be so on Monday night, Joe Turner, who with the aid of Washington wrestling fans, raised $206 last week, again comes forward, this time with a fight card, to help the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund. Some guy is going to try to make it plenty hot for Kid Cocoa, and I hope there's piles of sugar in the box office.

HAIGHT

Boss, I recommend we tear up the passes on this one.

Now if the word "fight" didn't remind me of something I wouldn't be a Haight. Tell the truth I never could fight, but being the youngest of the four Haight boys, I could put up a fair sort of a battle, if I must say it myself, as long as I had my brothers around for insurance.

Our gang, "The Little Potatoes (We're Hard To Peel)," used to regard me as better than a green hand with a half of broomstick whenever Eddie Folliard's "Bottom Boys" would exhaust our patience by coming up from 23rd and G to wink and say, "Oh You Kid" to our 14th and Florida Avenue subdebs.

I never had any ambitions to be a pro fighter. Some of the Little Potatoes used to square off and imitate the best fistic stances of Jim Jeffries and Jim Corbett, and on occasions this would mean several days of war with young disciples of the then current champion, Jack Johnson.

I fought in the ring only once, although years later as manager of Young Van I was knocked out by proxy twice on blows to his chin. My lone fistic appearance was by popular demand and not of my own making.

It was the night of my first day on active duty with the Navy. I had left Washington early in the morning, eager to save the world from democracy or something.

At the Philadelphia Navy Yard that afternoon, I was put through the mill. I had a vaccination, a shot in the arm and a haircut. After that, equipment was thrown at me so fast I could hardly catch it. It was almost sundown when I was given a slip with "BX181" on it, that being the barracks to which I had been assigned.

Dragging my hammock, sea bag and other paraphernalia, I set out in search of "BX181." After walking a mile, I came to a barracks, larger than the rest and brightly lighted. I sat on the steps to rest. A salty-looking sailor came up and I asked, "How can I find BX181."

He replied, "Just come right in here." He helped me in with my stuff and when my eyes had become used to the place I saw it was a recreation hall with a boxing ring in which two men were swinging at each other.

When the bout ended, a rather tough-looking gob came over where I was standing, looked at my ill-fitting uniform and asked, "Did you ever do any fighting, Kid?"

I told him I had tried it a little bit around the neighborhood in Washington.

"Well, you're going to fight tonight," he replied. "What's your fighting name?"

I tried to tell him that I didn't want to fight, but, somehow, a few minutes later I found myself sitting on a stool in the corner of the ring and a voice rang out: "In this corner, from Washington, D. C., the Neighborhood Kid."

Well, Boss, I'll always believe that they held my head up to a revolving wagon wheel with the rim off. If I had an account in a blood bank that night I could have deposited 3 quarts without trying.

When I woke the next morning I was in a hammock. I rubbed my eyes and yelled "Where am I?" to a gob who was swinging a mop at the other end of the barracks.

"You're in BX181," he replied, rather sarcastically, "and believe me, kid, you're plenty heavy."

Always your ace,

U. S. S. HAIGHT.

Runs, Hits & Errors

With SHIRLEY POVICH

(All communications to this department should be addressed to Shirley Povich, Angebilt Hotel, Orlando, Fla.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 26.—Catcher Rick Ferrell had at least one supporter in his salary battle with Clark Griffith which ended when he signed today. Washington Fan Frank L. Tuthill, of the Dupont Apartments, declared that Ferrell deserved a raise. Writes Tuthill:

"Washington will be lucky to finish out of the cellar if it doesn't sign Ferrell. He's the only catcher on the team who can handle Dutch Leonard's knuckle ball, and Leonard couldn't win with any other Washington catcher. I've seen them butch his delivery.

"Ferrell never did get the credit that was coming to him for receiving Leonard. I used to catch a knuckle ball myself in the Western Association, and I know how tough it is on a catcher. He takes a chance on getting a finger broke on every pitch. A knuckler will make the best catcher in the world look bad at times.

"Clark Griffith can tout his young pitchers as much as he likes, but if he's half smart he'll give Ferrell the raise that's coming to him and keep Leonard a winning pitcher."

COMMENT—No doubt is there that the only catcher on the Washington club who can do a decent job with Leonard's knuckle ball is Ferrell. The others are no stars at handling even fast-ball and curve-ball pitching. The irony is though that there is a catcher in the minor league who, once the property of the Nats, used to do a better job of receiving Leonard's knuckler than Ferrell. He is Tony Giuliani, now with Montreal, for whom Leonard always had a preference. Ferrell's holdout, however, is over and he will be around to handle Leonard's knuckler.

FLASH—The new Washington uniforms for 1941 will present the Nats with large W's on their chest instead of small W's on the sleeves. The stockings, instead of solid black, will be half white, with white stripes around the upper leg.

An Alexandria, Va., lad, Bill Kennedy, is beginning to command attention among the rookie pitching crop in the Nats' camp. He is a slightly temperamental left-hander who was with the Nats' Orlando team last season.

Shortly after the start of the Orlando club's season, Kennedy was seized with homesickness and hitch-hiked his way back to Washington to lay his troubles before Clark Griffith. He said he was broke, among other things, and that he had precious little left on pay day after Griffith deducted $10 a week for salary advances.

The Nats' owner gave the lad a heart-to-heart talk and agreed to cancel the rest of the debt. He bought Kennedy transportation back to Orlando on a day coach. The boy road all night and arrived here at 4 p. m., just in time to catch the team's bus to Gainesville, Fla. After a four-hour bus ride he learned that he was to pitch that night. Protesting that he was without sleep, he went to the mound nevertheless. And pitched himself a four-hit shutout.

Hyattsville's 16-Team Tourney Opens Today

Eight Games Booked This Afternoon And Tonight; Rivals Evenly Matched

Picking favorites in Hyattsville High School's second annual gold cup basketball tournament, opening today, is just about as easy as attempting to tag Yehudi in a game of blind man's buff.

The suburban tournament may outdo some of the metropolitan tourneys in the matter of close games. Sixteen teams, considered evenly matched, will compete in the Hyattsville gym.

The host teams promise to be prominent. The Hyattsville boys who on Tuesday defeated Gaithersburg for their sixteenth triumph of the season have lost only four games. In fact, they have compiled a winning streak of ten consecutive games, the last five victories in the absence of their coach, flu-stricken Bill Yarnall.

Yarnall, however, is expected to be on the scene to lead his charges in the fray today, against Laurel, at 4 p. m.

Hyattsville's girls also have a fine record. They won 13 out of 17 starts. However, three of Hyattsville's forwards are doubtful starters today. Geneva Clark, a pulled ligament in her ankle; Frances Arendes, hobbling with an injured knee, and Hildur Reeves, recovering from an attack of the flu.

Devitt Prep, the only out-of-county team in the tournament, is scheduled to tangle with Maryland Park High School in the first boys' game at 2 p. m. Devitt has won 10 of 19 games, while the Parkers have a .500 average for the season.

The Hornets rallied in the last quarter and came within two points of tying the count but Wilson gradually widened the gap.

John Smith Resigns Post At Argyle Country Club

Greenkeeper, Manager Had Served 14 Years At 9-Hole Course; Tourney to Belle Haven

John M. Smith, who filled the roles of greenskeeper and manager of Argyle Country Club for the past 14 years, has resigned, effective within the next two weeks.

Smith, who supervised the golf course work, ran the clubhouse and kitchen with the help of his wife, and also sold golf equipment, will go into business in Silver Spring. He will be succeeded as greenskeeper by his brother, Roger Smith. A successor in the clubhouse has not been named.

Smith took over the duties at the nine-hole course in Silver Spring in 1927, succeeding Rudy Will, who is now greenskeeper at Woodmont Club. The club is now in its best physical condition in history.

The golfing debut of the Middle Atlantic Association of Greenskeepers is scheduled for next Monday, March 3, at Belle Haven, weather permitting. A dinner-meeting at 6 p. m. will follow the afternoon golf.

John Shorey was in town completing arrangements for taking over the pro post at the Stonewall Jackson Club at Staunton, Va., next month . . . Allan Burton, Army and Navy mentor, just returned from a three-week vacation in Miami . . . Manor Club members can stop counting the fourth hole as a potential birdie. It is being lengthened some 50 yards and it will take two pretty good shots now to get over the ditch in 2 and will be a good par 5 . . . Joe Curtin, Mel Shorey's assistant at Indian Spring, is now working at Fort Belvoir . . . Hottest golf in town at present is in the Rock Creek two-ball matches. Ed Gambles' Shot in Last Seconds Wins

Score Changes Hands 5 Times; Hamill And Eckrich Lead Rivals in Counting

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 26.—Episcopal High School cagers took a spine-tingling decision from a clever Georgetown Prep quintet here this afternoon, winning by 34-33 on Ed Gamble's lay-up shot in the last 40 seconds of play. It was the Maroons' tenth victory against six setbacks for the current campaign.

Gamble's game-winning goal came as a climax to a thrilling last quarter, in which the score changed hands five times after the two teams had finished the third quarter in a 24-24 deadlock. A few seconds before, Georgetown had gone out in front on Decker's field goal, but Gamble clinched the victory when he took a pass from Tom Hamill under the basket.

With 30 seconds of play remaining, Referee Al Doran called a foul on Eckrich, of Georgetown, and Episcopal's captain, Bunny Berkeley, elected to take the ball out of bounds rather than risk a shot from the foul line. The Maroons retained possession of the ball until the final whistle sounded.

Georgetown held a 7-6 lead at the end of the first quarter, but fell behind in the second to trail by an 18-11 margin at the half. In the third quarter, the Little Hoyas rallied, and succeeded in knotting the count as the period ended.

Tom Hamill, of Episcopal, and Eckrich, of the Little Hoyas, shared scoring honors with 14 points apiece.

Mrs. Jenkins Takes Command Of Hubby Lew's Training

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Lou Ambers, former lightweight king who once was in the laundry business in Herkimer, N. Y., shown above rinsing out a few things at Mme. Bey's training camp at Summit, N. J., yesterday as he got ready for his nontitle fight with Lew Jenkins in New York tomorrow night

By the Associated Press

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Feb. 26.—The "boss" is around these days, so Lew Jenkins is drinking his two quarts of goat's milk every day.

To those who know the Jenkinses of Sweetwater, Tex., the boss is Mrs. Lew—otherwise "Katie"—and she has taken over full charge of the lightweight champion's training for his fight in Madison Square Garden Friday night with former 135-pound king Lou Ambers.

Lew may be the man of the family, but when Katie gives him the word about anything, the Sweetwater swatter doesn't argue.

However, for Katie to take command of Lew's training is something you wouldn't ordinarily expect. Up to now, Lew's erstwhile handler, hilarious Hymie Caplin, handled these details, and informed Katie that wives are about as welcome around a training camp as a shortage of steaks. Katie didn't believe this on one occasion last year, and arrived at Lew's camp one sunny afternoon to have it out with Hymie. Hymie chased her right out of there—but she took Lew with her, leading him by a figurative ear back to New York where she could keep an eye on him.

Katie in Command

This time Hymie can't make it. He is awaiting sentence for a recent conviction. So Katie is in command at the camp here and is ready to persuade Lew if he disobeys such orders as drinking his goat's milk or getting to bed at 11. Katie makes sure he does his road work, too. She paces him on a bicycle as he trots around the Jersey hills. Also on hand is Lew's manager, Fred Browning, of Dallas, who says Hymie will get his usual cut out of Friday's fight.

Jenkins hasn't let the feminine touch around his training camp bother him a bit. He looks as good, particularly from a punching angle, as he did when he was preparing to take the title away from Ambers last year—which he did with a three-round knockout.

G. W. Primes For St. John's Of Brooklyn

Taking all angles into consideration, George Washington University cagers face what may be their most important game of the season here Monday night at Riverside when Coach Joe Lapchick brings his St. John's of Brooklyn club to town.

The Reinhartmen want revenge for that 47-40 defeat last year; they must win to remain in consideration for any out of town tourney bids, and a victory is also necessary to key them up for the second of the Georgetown clashes two nights later on the same floor.

G. W. More Active

More active than the Johnnies, G. W. U. has won 17 out of 20 games while the New Yorkers had dropped 4 out of 14 before their last Garden appearance.

Lapchick, poker-faced member of the Original Celtics who is in his fifth year as coach of the Red Birds, has placed them in the Sportswriter's Championship tournament for the past two years. Last year G. W. stayed in the game until a flurry of Johnny baskets in the final minutes beat them at Eastern High School.

It will be only the second out-of-town appearance of the year for the Johnnies, who lost to Temple in Philadelphia on their only other trip.

Mexico Five To Play A. U. Here Tonight

The University of Mexico basketball team will conclude its 25-game, 2-month tour of the United States tonight in an international setting, meeting American University here on the Eagles court at 8:45.

Mexican Ambassador Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera will head the delegation from the Mexican Embassy while other honored guests will be L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; E. G. Trueblood and Herbert Bursley, of the State Department, and James Bennett, of the Department of Justice.

The invaders have been on a two-month tour of American college basketball courts and due to the schedule of big-name schools they show a deficit to date, with 9 victories against 14 defeats.

The Mexicans have been impressive in defeat, however, and have received favorable comment in all appearances.

American U. will be in no mood to let the visitors get away with anything, however, as a farewell gift from the Nation's Capital, for Coach Staff Cassell's boys need a victory tonight for an even break for the season. They have won six and lost seven to date, their latest triumph an upset over Western Maryland's second place team in the Mason-Dixon Conference standings.

The game will be the first international college court game in the city's history. Mexico toured the West Coast two years ago, but it is their first trip East.

Senior Ring Entries See First Action

Seniors will make their debut in the 1941 District Amateur Athletic Union's Boxing Tournament when it enters its second week at Turner's Arena tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Thirty-four well conditioned seniors reported for weighing in and physical examinations at the Knights of Columbus Hall last night and none were turned away.

From six to ten seniors who already had entered the tournament were forced to pull out due to their being shifted to Fort Bliss, El Paso, Tex., with the National Guardsmen.

Smith On Hand

Bill Smith, another Guardsman who is located at Camp Meade, reported for weighing in at 175 pounds and was admitted.

Chairman Bill Mulligan of the A. A. U. boxing committee last night requested that all boxers entered in the tournament report at the dressing room of Turner's Arena tomorrow night at 7 o'clock.

Al Marggraf Rolls NewHigh With 191 Game

Al Marggraf, Galt Bros., turned the Jewelers' League upside down last night at New Recreation, rolling a tremendous game of 191 and setting a new all-time high mark. His set was 401, also high but not a record. The Galt boys took top totals for teams with 620 and 1,730. Shah & Shah won all three contests from Burnstine.

BANKER'S

In the Bankers' play at Arcadia it was Thrift, American Security & Trust No. 2 and Burnell, American Security & Trust No. 1, who divided high individual game with 157 each with the latter going on to take top set after a 396 pinfall which led his team to highs for the night of 634 and 1,796.

CIVIC LEAGUE

Major Robb, Optimists, again led the Civic League at New Recreation with individual highs of 135 and 355. The Civitans were best as a team, winning top totals after pinfalls of 528 and 1,570.

TEMPLE MINOR

John Dwyer, Boveglio Club, rolled 151 for game and 365 for set to lead the individuals of the Temple Minor League at Northeast Temple. Eastern Pharmacy took top game with 577 while McKee Pontiac won the set after a pinfall of 1,665.

SOUTHEAST

Ernest Schilke, Bacas Bros., was the star of the Southeast play at Queen Pin last night, his 178 game and 390 set being high. The Quality Shop boys took team high game with a 606 count, thanks to the help of Chick Davis' 353, and all their games from Rosson Motor as well, despite Elmer Wesley's 362 set. City Baking won the odd contest from Chat's Liquor even though the latter had high set of 1,753 and Lee Jenkins a nice 365 count. Brad Mandley sparked the City Baking boys with his 378.

Betty's Bob Captures Two-Mile Event at Hialeah Park Track

Winner Scores Over Brown Queen II by 4 Lengths; Bright Rebel Is Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 26.—One of those turf rarities—a 2-mile race—was the most interesting attraction here today. Thirteen route runners lined up for the Lynwood Purse, decided over the grass, and Mrs. R. E. Wingfield's Betty's Bob rewarded the talent with an easy four-length victory under the guidance of Eddie Arcaro. The gulding previously had won a coupe of 1⅛-mile affairs here and has established himself as the top plater of the meeting over "marathon" distances.

Second money went to Joe W. Brown's Brown Queen II, an entry with Brown Bomb. The Tower Stable's Bright Steel was third, a length and a half away. The victor, a $5.10 for $2 favorite, galloped the distance in 3:31 1-5.

Arcaro broke the choice on top, then eased back and allowed Nightlily to show the way. Betty's Bob had dead aim on the pacemaker and started to put him away after a lap of the field. Assuming a wide advantage, Betty's Bob just coasted through the late stages and proved much the best. Brown Queen II, one of the early trailers, spurted in the last quarter mile and outfinished Bright Rebel. Weary Flower was fourth in the field of 13 various-price platers.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ETERNAL BULL, $3.70, $3.10, $2.40; IMPLICIT, $6.40, $4.30; DATED UP (field), 3.00.

ETERNAL BULL, much the best, opened up a winning lead the first quarter mile and won as his rider pleased. IMPLICIT, well up and clear all the way, disposed of the others in the stretch run. DATED UP gained steadily in the final furlong and wore WALLINGFORD down. The latter, prominent early, weakened in the drive.

SECOND RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:36½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KURDISTAN, $20.30, $7.00, $4.60; BRIGHT VICTORY, $4.40, $3.40; PANJAB, $4.70.

KURDISTAN, restrained until midway around the lower turn, gradually bettered his position when placed to pressure and wore BRIGHT VICTORY down in the final drive. BRIGHT VICTORY held the field safe for speed, saved ground all the way, but could not withstand the winner's bid when the test came. PANJAB gained steadily under hard pressure and easily disposed of the others. SIR AJAX pulled up decidedly lame.

Daily double ETERNAL BULL and KURDISTAN paid $45.60.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:08½. Winner, Mrs. F. Nugent's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPINO GOLD, $10.10, $4.50, $2.90; HIGHSCOPE, $4.00, $2.60; RANGE DUST, $2.70.

ESPINO GOLD, favored by a swift pace, began to better his position on the outside in the final quarter mile and wore the leaders down in the closing strides. HIGHSCOPE, on the inside and under pressure throughout, was in the thick of the fight and outlasted RANGE DUST. The latter took a brief lead on the stretch turn, but then hung in the stretch run. MUTINOUS was blocked while trying to slip through at the furlong pole.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:37½. Winner, J. H. Whitney's b. c. Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al: Lest we forget, the first outdoor racing around here will be the annual point-to-point program of Redland Hunt, to be staged in nearby Maryland, March 8. Thomas T. Mott, M. F. H., is going to see me next week about the races and some other things. One of the members of the Virginia Breeders' Association wants to remind those interested that there will be a meeting Saturday at 4 p. m., at the Red Fox Tavern at Middleburg. Getting to be a newsy little column, eh? The horse that was named after Art Brown won yesterday, I mean Eternal Bull, and that pay-off of 85 cents on a dollar is just about his speed. A little bird has told me that Preston Burch, Washington trainer, is going to take over the conditioning of Challedon and other Brann horses some time this spring. The same little bird told me that Watts was going to return as Gustav Ring's trainer and he was right on that one. In case you are at Hialeah on Saturday—the day passes which have been rather easy to go will not be good for the big final program. The fact that Bowie is going to have eight races is welcome news to Maryland breeders, who get a $250 bonus each time one of the horses bred by them wins other than a Maryland-bred race. The added event will give them 11 more opportunities to collect. If you have wondered what became of Sonny Workman, he is now at Hot Springs, taking the baths and working out. He plans to ride again this year. He is still young enough and needs only to beat that tough guy, "Kid Weight." Only 33 days until Bowie. BILL.

First race—Ration seems capable of being prominent if not the winner in the day's opening hop, skip and jump for juveniles. Roberts will do the booting. Son Islam has worked well and will get some backing. Violante has speed but may not be able to overcome the inside post position.

Second race—Wha Hae is fast and appears well placed in this field of sprinters. Gets a modest assignment thanks to the apprentice allowance and I'm going to string along. Talent has stretch-running ability and could be along in time to cause trouble. Bold Turk for the minor award.

Third race—Crius has been primed for a test of this sort and I have reason to believe this will be the right day. English Harry is far down the eligible list but will have to be dealt with if in action. Blacant to account for the show money.

Fourth race—The Bryson Entry of Here Again and Becomly, with the accent on the latter, may provide the winner of this event. Both are fit as hands make horses. Miss Beans has speed and should be a keen factor. Remote Control could be third.

Fifth race—Cavalier gets a light assignment in this, likes the distance and needs only the right handling. Mill Tower and Choppy Sea probably are best of the others and will fight it out if the top fellow makes mistakes.

Sixth race—The Woodvale Entry of Sir Gibson and Woodvale Lass gets the call in this distance test. The first-named is the chief reliance of the stable. Army Song is in excellent shape and should be close. Dunade to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Don Moss awoke with a bang last out and may come back with another smashing race under McCreary's riding. Fairflax had done everything asked and is a threat. The Widener Entry probably will account for third money.

Eighth race—In the day's finale, I'm taking Snow, one who seems to have an edge over this kind. Quaroma and White Hot for the place and show awards.

Best bet—Cavalier.

Nickel Supply Declared at Record High

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 26.—Robert C. Stanley, president of International Nickel Co. of Canada, said today people were trying to buy more nickel than immediately needed and that the supply of the white metal "will be ample for the needs of the national defense program and British and Canadian orders."

Supplies of nickel available in the United States have been brought to record heights through expansion of production facilities and other means, Stanley said, adding:

"The immediate calls for nickel by the nickel consuming industries in the United States are considerably larger than the supply which is now provided. It is questionable, however, whether the actual United States needs for nickel, as reflected by the consumption of nickel products of the nickel-consuming industries, exceed the available supply. It seems apparent there is an inflation of demand as compared with real consumption.

"There are evidences also of overbuying out of regard to precautionary and speculative considerations, and orders for nickel-containing products not immediately required have been crowded into the producing plants earlier than necessary."

Stanley said supplies were being allocated to consumers "as equitably as possible," adding that consumers themselves were cooperating.

W. Averill Harriman, materials chief of Washington's OPM, yesterday said a survey of the nickel situation was being undertaken as a result of informal inquiries which indicated some users were building up "unnecessarily large inventories."

Gas Firm Issue Nears Final Approval

Stockholders' approval of the Washington Gas Light Co.'s plan to issue an additional 90,000 shares of $4.25 cumulative preferred stock is virtually assured. Company officials reported yesterday that nearly two-thirds of the stockholders had sent in proxies.

Formal approval of the extension of capital will be voted at the annual shareholders' meeting on March 10. The gas company officials expect to issue 30,000 shares of the new preferred stock this year with the remaining authorized amount to be issued as additional funds as required.

Chipman Gets Pit Seat

The Chicago Board of Trade has elected G. Bowie Chipman to membership, it was learned yesterday. Chipman is associated with the Washington office of Laidlaw & Co.

Insurance Meeting

Business life insurance and tax problems were discussed by A. T. Kirkland, of Newark, N. J., at a special meeting Tuesday of the Washington agency of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.

Dividends Boosted

General Credit, Inc., auto finance firm of Washington, declared a common stock dividend of $1.50 and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 on preferred stock. In the previous two quarters, payments of 50 cents were declared on the common stock. The latest dividends are payable March 1.

Chlorine Scarcity Faced

With the Nation facing a possible scarcity of chlorine, an economic method for making chlorine from by-product hydrochloric acid is needed, declares Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, publication of the American Chemical Society. While much work has been done and some patents exist, the problem has not been completely solved, says the journal, the editor of which is Dr. Harrison E. Howe, of Washington, chmeical priority executive under the Office of Production Management.

"Informal estimates indicate that before long there may be a scarcity of chlorine in the United States," it is pointed out. "Building new plants to meet the abnormal demand which may appear on the horizon might easily leave excess production capacity to plague the industry after the emergency is over."

Businessmen's Dilemma

Pointing out that America's defense effort requires a middle course which will unite labor, agriculture, business and Government in a full recognition of domestic and foreign problems, Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, declared in his monthly business review released here yesterday that "business is seeing the development of an attitude whereby it is apt to be 'damned if it does and damned if it doesn't.'

"Already there are attempts to maneuver business into the center of a controversy on plant expansion for defense purposes," he says. "Many of the proponents of such an increase of facilities were in the group that in the past two decades unfairly branded many businessmen as 'merchants of death' because, when the previous call to arms was sounded, they expanded to meet war needs.

"Is it to be the fate of today's business managers that they will hear a postwar accusation along similar lines?"

Investment Portfolios

The investment firm of Merrill Lynch, E. A. Pierce & Cassatt, with a branch office in Washington, announced that it has evolved eight preplanned portfolios to meet the needs of investors in varying economic circumstances. Selections for these portfolios were made by specialists on the basis of such factors as income, safety, diversification, opportunity for appreciation in value, and marketability.

The portfolios range from $2,000, described as suited for salaried people, housewives or small business people, to $500,000.

Price Control Unlikely

The odds are against passage of a bill to provide for Federal control over prices at this time. Outright price control by legislation will be avoided just as long as possible. One reason for this is that prices are inextricably linked to wage rates. A firm ceiling cannot be placed over prices, if at the same time, labor is given tacit encouragement to press for higher wage rates. Labor now has its chance, and so long as major strikes can be avoided, the Administration has no intention of killing the workers' golden opportunity to gain a larger share of the national income.

Farm Income Rises Slightly in Month

By the Associated Press

Farm cash income from marketings and Government benefit payments amounted to $750,000,000 in January compared with $743,000,000 in the corresponding month last year and $842,000,000 in December, the Agricultural Department reported yesterday.

Income from crops was slightly below the corresponding period of the year before, the Department said, largely because of smaller amounts of corn going under Government loan and lower prices of potatoes. However, a materially higher income was received from all livestock and livestock products.

Atlas Stock Asset Value Off in Year

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—Floyd B. Odlum, president of Atlas Corporation, reported to stockholders of the big investing company the indicated net asset value of the firm's common stock on December 31 was $12.26 a share compared with $12.80 a share on December 31, 1939, and $11.43 a share last June 30. Commenting on the 12-month decline of 4 per cent in the asset value of the common stock, Odlum pointed to a general common stock decline in the same period of 19 per cent.

Strength in Shipping Shares Stands Out As Stock Market Reacts Downward

New York, Feb. 26.—Shipping shares spurted to the front of the stock market today as the preceding recovery flattened out in most groups. Strength in shipping and scattered industrial shares illustrated the selectivity of the buying. Steels, aircrafts, rails, motors and other leaders of the week's advance wavered on selling by traders who assumed the rally had gone far enough.

Advances in ocean shipping rates, the huge backlogs of unfilled orders at shipyards and the move to modify the Federal excess profits levy appeared to attract buying to the water carrier issues.

American Shipbuilding, New York Shipbuilding, Bath Iron Works, International Mercantile Marine and American Hawaiian Steamship ended fractions to more than a point higher. In the Curb, Todd Shipyards rose 1¼.

Bethlehem Steel, the Nation's leading shipbuilder, rallied with the shipping group from an early sell-off, but was shadowed by the threat of a strike tie-up of its Lackawanna, N. Y., plant. Bethlehem closed at 79¾, off ¼, after having sold as low as 78¾.

Minor gains just about offset small losses in most issues. The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks finished unchanged at 41.4. It had risen from 39.9 since mid-February. Transactions amounted to 382,970 shares, against 357,230 the preceding session.

Market improvement was followed by a resumption of over-the-counter sales of listed securities, suspended during the recent fall of prices. A block of 10,000 shares of Inland Steel was offered after the close of the exchange at 77¼ compared with the closing quotation of 78½ on the exchange.

The let-down in Far Eastern tension was reflected in commodity markets, where imported staples had been rising. Tin and rubber declined. Trends were mixed, with Chicago wheat rallying ⅜ to 1 cent a bushel net. Corn was down ⅛ to ½. New York cotton futures ended 5 cents a bale up to 15 cents down.

Many traders still seemed to be awaiting further development of spring offensive plans in Europe. The $15,000,000,000 in arms awards were counted upon by business analysts as a sustaining prop for U. S. industry for many months.

Despite favorable January operating income returns from numerous roads, rails mostly slipped fractions, including Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania. Union Pacific advanced a point to 79.

Aircrafts and coppers held previous gains, with Douglas, Sperry, Anaconda and Kennecott a shade higher at the finish. International Paper preferred, backed by reports of a striking increase in earnings last year, jumped 2½ to 63½.

Off fractions in the curb list were Humble Oil, Gulf and American, Gas & Electric. United Shoe Machinery rose 1¼. Small gains were recorded in New Jersey Zinc, Lake Shore Mines and Bell Aircraft. Transactions totaled 77,000 shares against 79,000 yesterday.

Brokers Earn 18-Cent Average On Transaction

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—An analysis of brokerage house business, published today in the Exchange Magazine, house organ of the New York Stock Exchange, shows these firms make an average profit of 18 cents on a transaction.

The analysis sums up a survey by the management engineering firm of Stevenson, Jordan & Harrison of 18 commission firms—five large, 10 of medium size and three small—three bond houses and four specialist firms in the first six months of 1940. The 25 houses covered stock, bond and commodity fields.

The survey found the gross income on the average transaction was $7.36, with total operating expenses per transaction of $9.81, leaving a deficit of $2.45. However, interest profit on margin accounts amounted to $2.63, leaving a net profit of 18 cents.

The surveying firm reported some of the brokerage houses had adjusted their operations to a continuing trading level as low as 400,000 shares a day, but added that "higher expectations seem to average approximately 800,000 shares daily."

A similar survey, conducted in 1938, found that firms were predicating their operations on the expectation of 1,000,000-share days.

Tax-Exempt U. S. Bonds Lead Upturn

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 26.—The whole bond market strengthened today under leadership of United States Governments and foreign issues, the latter in demand on lessened war tension.

Most popular mediums in the Treasury list were the tax-exempt long termers, such as the 2¾s of 1960-1965, the 2¾s of 1965-1960 and the taxable new 7-9-year 2s, which the Treasury announced yesterday would replace the maturing 3⅜s. The distant maturities ended up on both the stock exchange and outside markets an average of ⅛ of a point. The new obligations gained about ¼ in both markets.

Dealers said many holders of the matured 3⅜s disdained the opportunity of converting their bonds into the 2s but, instead, took the cash and immediately did a refunding job of their own by planting the proceeds into as many of the long-term tax-exempts as they could. The latter sell at premiums of $8 or $9 over par per $1,000 bond whereas the matured issue brought only around $1 premium.

Principal takers of the new taxable 2s, dealers said, came from managers of pension funds, charitable funds and others who do not have to pay income taxes. Also, banks both in New York and in outside cities were buyers of various existing Treasury obligations in amounts described as "fair."

The market for domestic corporate bonds was slightly more active than on Tuesday and the trend was higher in most all groups.

Structural Steel Bookings Soar

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—Fabricated structural steel bookings in January were about 130 per cent higher than the average monthly bookings in the past 10 years, the American Institute of Steel Construction announced today.

Contracts closed in the first month of 1941 were estimated at 258,499 tons compared with 81,689 tons in the like month a year ago. Shipments in the month amounted to 150,375 tons versus 110,919 tons a year ago.

New York Liberalizes Bank Loan Powers

New York, Feb. 26 (AP).—The New York State banking department has notified banks under its jurisdiction that they may make loans up to 25 per cent of capital, surplus and undivided profits to a single borrower under emergency plant facilities contracts. The limit heretofore has been 10 per cent of capital funds.

Broadening of loaning powers was to assist in financing the national defense program to a greater degree, especially as regards smaller banks.

Canada Plans to Build 150 War Factories

The Commerce Department said yesterday Canada expected to complete 150 war factories, costing $270,000,000, by the end of this year.

Advices from Canada indicated the projects include:

Shell plants, $31,000,000; armaments, $96,000,000; aircraft, $15,000,000; automotive, $6,000,000; chemicals and explosives, $87,000,000; machine tools, $11,000,000; miscellaneous, $34,000,000.

The department said that originally most of these plants expected to buy their machinery in Great Britain, but lately have turned more and more to the United States for machinery.

Baldwin Orders Leap

Buying Spurt Lifts Wheat In Late Trade

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 26.—A spurt of buying late in today's grain market session lifted wheat prices about a cent a bushel, wiping out most of the setback which occurred yesterday.

Orders came largely from previous "short" sellers and dealers acting on strength of securities as well as from mills lifting hedges against flour business or taking commitments for future requirements. Washington reports of various plans offered for continuation, extension or revision of the farm program as well as the international war and political picture continued to unsettle the market.

Prices rose as much as 1¼ cent and closed ⅝ to 1 cent higher than yesterday, May 83⅝@¾, July 79⅛@¼. Corn was ¼ to ½ lower, May 60¾@⅝; July 59⅞. Oats ¼ to ⅜ down; soybeans ⅝ to 1⅛ higher; rye ¼ to½ up, and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Exporters reported Chinese interests recently purchased 300,000 bushels of Pacific Coast wheat and were in the market for more if vessel space is available. Finland was in the market for 140,000 bushels of Canadian oats.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 26 (AP).—Philip Morris & Co. Ltd., Inc., announced today new financing of $14,899,100 for the purpose of rebuilding the old United States Tobacco Co. plant here to increase cigarette output and to improve the company's bank loan position.

J. E. Archbell, director in charge of operations here, said the company would begin reconstruction of the old building within a short time and also would construct a half-block long shipping and storage warehouse nearby. The old United States Tobacco plant was purchased recently by Philip Morris.

The company has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission a registration statement in connection with the issuance of 148,991 shares of $100 par value 4¼ per cent dividend preferred stock, which will be used to provide capital and reduce loans.

Checking Delinquents

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has at its command many sources for checking up delinquent taxpayers. One of these is the "information at source" provision of the Internal Revenue Code, under which persons, "in whatever capacity acting," are required to report on Form 1099, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, D. C., payments of fixed or determinable income to another in the calendar year of 1940 of $800 or more.

If the recipient is married, and is a citizen or resident of the United States, reports need not be made of salary or other compensation for personal services unless the payments aggregate $2,000 or more. If the marital status of the payee is unknown to the payor, the payee is considered a single person for the purpose of filing an information return of salary or other compensation for personal services.

Fixed or determinable income includes wages, salaries, royalties, premiums, rent, interest, etc. A separate return of information for each employee is required of employers. The requirements are not limited to periodical payments, but a single payment must be reported. Domestic and resident foreign corporations are required to make a separate report, Form 1099, of dividends or distributions for each individual, citizen or resident of the United States, resident fiduciary, or a resident partnership any member of which is a citizen or resident, who was paid $100 or more during the calendar year 1940.

All persons or organizations acting at any time during the year 1940 as broker or other agent in stock, bond, or commodity transactions (including banks which handle clearing orders for depositors or custodian accounts) are required to file annual returns of information on Form 1100 with respect to all customers, depositors, or accounts for whom or which the total amount of the sales of securities or commodities, or the total market value of the securities exchanged, is $25,000 or more during the calendar year 1940 and each subsequent calendar year, with certain exceptions. A separate Form 1100 must be prepared for each customer, depositor or account for whom or which business was transacted during the year, and must show the name and address and other information provided for in the form.

Information returns are carefully checked with individual returns of taxpayers. Thousands of delinquent returns and additional revenue amounting to millions of dollars have been secured as the result of the examination of information returns.

Steele Meets Hornet Tonight

Match Listed As for Title At Turner's

Ernie Dusek Pitted Against Paul Boesch In Semifinal Bout; Card Starts at 8:30

Ray Steele, often referred to as the "Master of a Thousand Holds," will defend his National Wrestling Association championship tonight at Turner's Arena against the Green Hornet, the man in mask. It will be the first N. W. A. title bout, and the N. W. A. rules will prevail.

Promoter Joe Turner, judging by the advance sale, is expecting another big outpouring such as those which saw the last two Hornet-Dusek battles.

The Hornet is very much in evidence at the Arena these Thursday nights. Strutting around the ring with an emerald mask and gym suit to match, the Hornet is a grotesque looking figure, and despite some herculean efforts on the part of his opponents none has been able to rip off his hood.

Steele, however, claims he has devised an attack which, he says, will just about lop off the Hornet's head along with his mask. The champion, who won the N. W. A. title from Bronko Nagurski last year, features a paralyzing leglock, which ties up his foes in octopus-like fashion. The Hornet, however, will rely on that potent "body bend," which already has rendered hors d'combat six of his seven victims.

Ernie Dusek, winner over the Hornet two weeks ago in a questionable decision, and disqualified against him in 43 minutes last week, will return to meet Paul Boesch in a semiwindup. Dusek wants a shot at Steele, and the Hornet, if the latter wins.

Lou Plummer will engage Warren Bockwinkle, Joe DeValteau will meet Milo Steinborn and Abe Yourist will take on Fred Grobmier in other bouts on the card.

First match is at 8:30.

Sacred Heart Wins

Catherine McKaigh's 16 points paced Sacred Heart to a 35-25 victory over St. Patrick's yesterday on the loser's court. Miss Hughes, captain of the losing team, tied for scoring honors, also with 16 points.

It's always nice to know that you have the law on your side. And so this is to report that CBS's "American School of the Air" is getting in its two broadcasts today—the one for the East which you hear over WJSV at 9:15 a. m., and the one for the West at 3:30 p. m.—by courtesy of the police departments in two States.

The early broadcast is to originate in CBS's New York studios, but the afternoon show is scheduled to come from the Civic Auditorium in Atlantic City as a feature of the opening day of the First International Conference of "The School of the Air of the Americas"—that elongated title being because the "School of the Air" is now being heard not only in the United States but in all the countries of the western hemisphere.

The only train that will get Directress Nila Mack and her troupe of young actors and actresses to the Jersey resort in time for the broadcast leaves New York at 10:10 a. m., just 25 minutes after the morning broadcast is finished. Under normal traffic conditions, and with all the baggage they've got to take along, because they're doing the Atlantic City broadcast in costume, it would be impossible for them to make the train. But New York's police department is furthering the cause of eductaion nobly by instructing its traffic directors en route to clear the way, and providing a handsome escort of motorcycle patrolmen.

Not to be outdone, Atlantic City is having its guardians of law and order meet the troupe at the station and rush them to Civic Auditorium.

Bill Demands 'S.R.O.' Signs Be Posted Here

A bill which would require any exhibitor within the District to warn the public when he has standing room only was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Edmiston (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Edmiston's bill specifies the circus, theater, motion picture houses, auditorium, arena, carnival "or other exhibition open to the public." The penalty would be a fine up to $5,000.

The West Virginian explained that he and his ten-year-old daughter had been forced to sit on straw when attending a circus in Washington last season.

Two other District bills were reintroduced by the chairman of the Senate and House District Committees.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, offered a series of amendments to the barber regulation law. One of the amendments proposes a referendum to establish opening and closing hours.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, reintroduced a bill authorizing the Secretary of Interior to build and operate a stadium, parade field, swimming pools and other recreational facilities in Section F of Anacostia Park. The project, to be paid for out of Federal funds, would be subject to approval of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission.

Rules Proposed For Use of Roads With Army Units

Special rules to be followed by civilian motorists and pedestrians on highways and city streets used by Army units were suggested yesterday by the American Automobile Association.

Reports of numerous instances where motorists have interfered with the efficient movement of Army convoys prompted the proposed rules. They include:

Don't pass troop lines or mechanized forces on hills or curves.

In the city military convoys escorted by police may pass through red lights. Be sure there is a sufficient break in the column before proceding.

When encountering a convoy in the city pull to the side the same as you would for an emergency vehicle.

Cooperate at all times with directions given by those in charge of military units.

MRS. THOMAS

The future hotel executives and employes ranged in age from 19 to 58. Their diplomas represented the completion of four months of study.

Among the graduates was Mrs. Evelyn Miller Thomas, 42, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the mother of three children. Mrs. Thomas said she had made her living as a concert singer, but hopes to start a career in the hotel field "because it has always interested me."

Various phases of hotel work were discussed by Daniel Wathey, resident manager of the Roger Smith Hotel; Ernest S. Broadbent, promotion manager of the Maddux Hotels, and Wayne Wilmot, manager of the LaSalle Apartments. Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, vice president of the school, presented the graduates their diplomas. Clyde B. Douthat, an instructor, presided.

Slayer Completes Life Sentence, Dies at Gallinger

Thomas Bernard Brown, 66, completed a life term Tuesday for the murder of a Washington woman here in 1926—he died at Gallinger Hospital of a malignant disease.

Brown was sent to Gallinger from the Lorton Reformatory May 24, last year.

Brown pleaded guilty in February, 1927, to the fatal shooting of Miss Frances Voegle, then 37, at Fourteenth and Fairmont Streets Northwest. According to police, Miss Voegle refused to take a ride with the man and in a rage he fired seven bullets into her body.
